MAP OF EDINBURGH IN THE MID-EIGHTEENTH CENTURY ¹

IN these days of sketching and photography the step from the obvious to the elusive is not very plain.

In the sixteenth century, when sketching was rare and photography was unknown, every one knew what Holyrood Abbey, for example, was like, and so no one deemed it worth while to draw or accurately to describe it, but to us, four centuries later, its appearance eludes us, and is almost altogether unknown. Even in the eighteenth century, when the old city of the north was at the zenith of its reputation, every one knew the spot where anything historical happened, and where any historical personage dwelt. But so obvious was it all that almost no record has been left.

In the course of our reading of the old days we are often eager to know where this or that was, whether it be a house of historic importance, or the residence of some one of note ; but the records are so scanty, and, even where they do exist, are so inexact, that the fixing now of such spots is difficult and, in certain cases, impossible.

As this difficulty is getting greater year by year, no time was to be lost if anything was to be attempted to meet the want. Hence the idea of preparing yet another plan of Old Edinburgh with the view of trying to indicate as many places of interest as possible.

The places of interest at first selected numbered about six hundred ; but of these only about three hundred have been identified, although the lists have been passed through the hands of many well-known antiquaries.

Notwithstanding this comparative failure to overtake an exhaustive list, it was deemed right to attempt the task of embodying in the form of a map all the facts which could be ascertained, in case the knowledge even of these should be lost.

The first point was to decide what period should be taken. From the point of view of historic interest the time of Queen Mary might appear suitable, but the topographic material for that early period is so scanty, that a satisfactory result would be well-nigh impossible. Consequently the middle of the eighteenth century has been selected as being the period when the interest in the history of the Old Town reached its culminating point. This is also the period immediately preceding that in which the desire for city expansion and improvement resulted in the rise of the New Town and the disappearance of many interesting features in the Old.

The next consideration was to determine the preparation and scale of the map.

Edgar's published maps were too small for the purpose; later and larger scaled surveys were not accurate enough; and at length it was determined to take the 1851 Ordnance Survey for the basis, and thus to secure accuracy, the earlier surveys of parts altered or cleared away being used to supplement and correct the later. The map thus constructed is over $7\frac{1}{2}$ feet long, but it has been reproduced on a reduced scale by Messrs. Bartholomew, so that it would not be too bulky for our volume, or unwieldy for the student.

A list, lettered for reference, is given of the surveys and other authorities which have been relied upon in constructing the map; and this is followed by an alphabetical index of localities and houses with references to the preceding list for the authority on which the identifications have been based. There is also appended a list of wynds and closes, taken from the 1851 Survey, and from Peter Williamson's list, published in 1783.

Although the author is cognisant of difficulties and probable errors, he hopes that on the whole the identifications are as accurate as can be now obtained. To the many friends who have helped, the warmest thanks of all lovers of Edinburgh are due, but special mention of Mr. William Cowan, the President of the Club, must be made, for so kindly and so thoroughly revising both the map and the accompanying lists, providing thereby as thorough accuracy in research as is possible to-day.

JOHN A. FAIRLEY.

SHELLEY IN EDINBURGH

IT is a singular fact that Shelley, born the son of a country gentleman of Sussex, educated at Eton and Oxford, and passing most of his days in the more moderate climate of the south of England and Italy, should have been induced twice within the brief compass of his life to make the journey of more than two days by coach to Edinburgh, the cold capital of the north. The poet whose 'little round head'¹ was never more comfortable than when roasting before a blazing fire, and who wrote The Cenci on the roof of an Italian villa, under a blistering sun whose light and heat were 'intolerable to every other'² person thereabouts—this poet could not have selected Edinburgh for reasons of climate. Why, then, did he go to Edinburgh?

By 1811 Shelley had fallen under the spell of Godwin's teaching concerning the iniquity of the institution of marriage and the superiority of untrammelled love. Always eager to proselyte others, he undertook to convert his sisters and their schoolfellow, Harriet Westbrook, to his views. For a time Elizabeth Shelley promised well as a novice, but eventually proved a backslider. Harriet Westbrook's championship of this and other radical doctrines imbibed from Shelley brought her into collision with the authorities of the school at Clapham Common, which she and the Shelley sisters were attending. Nor were such unorthodox teachings more favourably received by Harriet's father, John Westbrook. Therefore Harriet, 'persecuted' (Shelleyan for opposed) by 'bigots' in school and home, must not remain within reach of her 'tormentors.' Fly with Shelley, her rescuing knight, she must; but how, and whither?

Shelley's Oxford friend, Hogg, had taken issue with his anti-marriage views, and as the result of an interchange of letters between the youths Shelley's citadel of Reason was somewhat shaken. 'The ties of love and honour' might be 'of sufficient strength to bind congenial souls,' but 'the arguments of impracticability, and . . . the disproportionate sacrifice which the female is called upon to make,'¹ won Shelley over to the observance of law on this point; and so, 'having agreed on a point of, in their eyes, so trifling importance,'² Harriet and he cast about for a clergyman to perform the rite which, as it seemed to them, had gained such unwarranted prestige from custom.

Now arose a difficulty. Neither bride nor groom was of legal age in England; they could not be married there. The laws of Ireland or Scotland might prove less strict. They would investigate at first hand. In the grey of an August dawn³ they took a hackney coach in London to the Bull and Mouth Tavern in Bull and Mouth Street, whence the northern mail coach would proceed via York and Berwick. Embarked on the mail that evening, they met a persuasive young Scottish advocate, who probably determined them to go to Edinburgh. Hogg says that this lawyer 'told them how to get married';⁴ and he may also have directed Shelley to a suite of large, comfortable ground-floor rooms kept by one William Cumming, exterior has been altered by the addition of an extra storey and the conversion of Shelley's rooms into a shop;¹ and internal changes have been made in both the ground-floor suite and that on the first floor. In the latter case, however, the changes have not been so extensive but that one may, by making a survey of the rooms,² obtain a fairly accurate idea of what the rooms corresponding to them on the ground floor must have been like in Shelley's day. But though I was able to see both these suites when visiting Edinburgh in the summer of 1920, I was not so fortunate with respect to the suite on the second floor, which in 1811 was the top suite, and which Hogg occupied while he still held the full confidence and esteem of Shelley and Harriet. Hogg, who seems to have been a rather exacting person, found the lodgings 'good,' the charges 'reasonable,' the meals 'abundant' and 'excellent'³ at 60 George Street; but he complained of an inefficient servant, a hard mattress, and the echoing thunders of the hall and stairway. In view of the last annoyance, indeed, he decided that he had been fated 'to lodge with Jupiter Tonans at the top of Olympus.'⁴ The only annoyance Shelley suffered, apparently, was from the shrill voice of Christie, the maid; and, of course, as soon as Hogg and Harriet discovered this fact, they took a perverse delight in drawing the girl into conversation in Shelley's presence.

From the hostler's lodgings Shelley and Harriet probably proceeded to the house of the Reverend Joseph Robertson, then pastor of Leith Wynd Chapel, one of the smaller churches described as 'connected with the establishment'⁵ in Edinburgh. Robertson was living at this time at 225, The Canongate,⁶ in the five-storey tenement at the side of which access may be had to Big Jack's Close. 'On the north side of the Canongate, opposite to St. John Street, a large and lofty stone tenement bears the name of Jack's Land, where the lovely Susannah, Countess of Eglinton, resided during her latter years, and was visited by Lady Jane Douglas, as appears in the evidence of the Douglas cause. The other tenants of its numerous flats were doubtless of corresponding importance in the social scale; but its most eminent occupant was David Hume, who removed thither in 1753, while engaged in writing his History of England, and continued to reside at Jack's Land during the most important period of his literary career.'¹ 'Jack's Land' appears to have been the property at 225, The Canon-gate. If this is so, it was a curious chance indeed that brought the young devotee of Hume to be married in the house already connected with so important a work of that writer as the History of England.

One can imagine the ardent Shelley explaining his desires to Robertson, urging the necessity of an immediate marriage, and perhaps enforcing his demands by assurances of a generous pourboire for the none too scrupulous clergyman. Under the laws of the Scottish Church, no minister might marry a couple unless the bride had been resident in the parish or county for a period of six weeks preceding the event, and then only after due proclamation of banns in churches of the city on three successive Sabbaths.² But Shelley and Harriet had barely arrived in Edinburgh, and there had been no time for such repeated proclamation of banns. What was to be done? Somehow, a certificate attesting six weeks' residence in Edinburgh by Harriet, and previous proclamation of banns 'in several churches in this city' was procured, bearing the signature of J[ohn] Fettes, District Session Clerk, and certified by Patrick Murray, teacher, and William Cumming, hostler.¹ The ceremony of marriage was then performed by Robertson, and the certificate endorsed in his hand: 'The within designed Parties were married before Witnesses by me, Joseph Robertson, Minister.' An entry recording the declaration of banns and Harriet's six weeks' residence was then made in practical duplicate of the certificate already described, in the small quarto record book of the session clerk of the City Parish, and this was certified by Cumming, Murray, and Shelley himself.² The entry in the record book is of August 1811, but does not fix the precise date. The original certificate is dated 'August 28, 1811.' But in the allegation filed by Shelley in 1814,³ on the occasion of his remarriage with Harriet, 'the twenty-ninth day of August, one thousand eight hundred and eleven,' is set down as the time at which the first ceremony was performed.

Perhaps (but the fact that the young Scottish advocate directed Shelley at once to Robertson, I think, indicates the contrary) this clandestine marriage was Robertson's first offence. If so, it was not his last. For seven years later he was arraigned, tried by the High Court of Justiciary, and found guilty of having celebrated two other such marriages in the autumn of 1817. With an accomplice, he was banished from Scotland,⁴ and demitted and deposed by the Church.⁵

The pages of the Journal are not numbered, but the Robertson case begins at the page dated '2nd March 1818.' An account of the trial appeared in the Scotsman, vol. ii., No. 61, p. 93 (Saturday, 21st March 1818), under the heading: 'High Court of Justiciary.'

Shelley seems to have had early misgivings as to the validity of their Scottish union. On 21st October 1811, he wrote to his kinsman, Thomas C. Medwin: 'In the course of three weeks or a month, I shall take the precaution of being remarried.' Mr. W. M. Rossetti has stated that in August 1813, Shelley having attained his majority, 'his first act was to marry Harriet over again in an Episcopal chapel in Edinburgh.' The information, Mr. Rossetti declared, came from 'an informant exceedingly unlikely to be mistaken.'¹ Yet no proof of such a marriage is forthcoming, and it is almost wholly discredited by the known remarriage, which, as a result of negotiations with money-lenders, and consideration of the effect which a faulty marriage ceremony might have upon the disposition of the Shelley estates, occurred on 24th March 1814, at St. George's Church, Hanover Square, London.

What was the nature of the city in which they spent their honeymoon? Baedeker's statement that Edinburgh is 'the most romantically beautiful city in Europe,' true as it is to-day, when the development of modern industry has introduced so much smoke and grime into the city as would set Ruskin weeping afresh to behold it, causes us to wonder how much more beautiful it must have been in Shelley's day, when a great part of the district in which he and Harriet resided was yet but sparsely settled and offered easy escape for long walks into the open country northward to the Forth, or eastward to Salisbury Crags and Arthur's Seat, or southward by way of the Meadows to the Blackford, the Braid, and the still more glorious Pentland Hills. Shelley, who had been passionately fond of cross-country walks in the quieter and less varied scenery of Oxfordshire, would have revelled in long tramps here; and when not occupied with voluminous correspondence, or reading, or adventurings into the society of Edinburgh, must often have indulged this pleasure. Hogg's evidence on this point is confusing. He barely finishes protesting that Shelley would not join him in 'pedestrian excursions from Edinburgh' when he says that daily 'after dinner, we all went forth together, to take as long a walk as could be brought within the compass of an afternoon.'¹ Probably he meant to say that Shelley (who did not wish to leave Harriet alone at this time) would not join him on one of those long rambles lasting several days, and covering several counties, which he digresses to describe in his Life of Shelley whenever the fancy strikes him, and whether Shelley happened to take the ramble or not.

But to all the natural beauty of scenery in and about Edinburgh I fail to find one certain word of reference in the poetry of that period; nor have any later passages been definitely connected with sights seen on this occasion. This may at first seem strange; but a careful reading of his early novels and the later Queen Mab, to speak only of the first period of his authorship, will show that he was drawing more heavily upon descriptions of other writers, and upon imagined scenery, than upon his own first-hand impressions of travel. By the time Alastor and the History of a Six Weeks' Tour appeared, in 1816 and 1817 respectively, his method had altered; yet even in Alastor he owes no slight debt to Wordsworth and to Southey.

By the first of October, Hogg, who had joined bride and groom in Edinburgh at the beginning of the previous month, found it necessary to return to conveyancers' chambers at York. Thither Shelley and Harriet accompanied him, the party travelling by post-chaise, and spending the first night at Belford, the second at Darlington, and arriving at York on the third day (probably 3rd October, on the evening of which day Shelley addressed a letter to his father from his new lodgings at York). Not until two years had passed over all their heads did Shelley and Harriet again see Edinburgh.

On this second visit Hogg was not of the party, but 'the laughing philosopher,' Thomas Love Peacock, had his place. This time the trip was made by Warwick and Keswick in the private coach which Shelley had purchased, a few months before, from a London coachmaker, for some five hundred pounds,¹ and which arrived in Edinburgh at length, about the middle of October 1813, in need of extensive repairs.² On reaching the Scottish capital again, I think it likely that the party proceeded first to their former address, but, failing to find suitable rooms with their old landlord, went around the corner of George Street to 36 Frederick Street, where an Alexander Laing³ provided them with lodgings. They had come to Edinburgh to gain peace of mind in remoteness from Shelley's numerous creditors. 'We think of remaining here all this winter,' Harriet wrote Mrs. Nugent; and she praised Edinburgh by saying: 'This City is, I think, much the best. The people here are not so intolerant as they are in London. Literature stands on a higher footing here than anywhere else.' ¹

As if in proof of Harriet's statement, there came to them a young Brazilian student named Baptista, who, encountering Queen Mab, which had just been published, was so moved by it that he determined to translate it into Portuguese. To this end he formed an acquaintanceship with Shelley; and even after Shelley withdrew from the city the two kept in touch with each other through letters. Later, they met again in London. But the translation begun with so much fervour of admiration was never finished; for Baptista was stricken with lung-disease, and died soon after.

Something—the bracing air, perhaps, of Edinburgh—seems to have spurred Shelley, on both visits, to almost incessant reading. Hogg relates how Shelley in 1811 brought 'lots of good books' ² to their lodgings in George Street—books borrowed, Hogg believed, from a public library, for Shelley carried them away as soon as they were read, and returned with other volumes. Two years later, Shelley wrote to Hogg, from Edinburgh: 'I have for some time given myself to study'; and he then enumerated, among the authors he had recently read, Plutarch and Homer, Tacitus and Cicero, Laplace and Hume. Of Plutarch's two essays, On Sarcophagi, he says: 'I intend to comment upon them, and to reason in my preface concerning the Orphic and Pythagoric system of diet.' ³ From this sentence we know that the Refutation of Deism was projected, and perhaps in part written, while Shelley was on the second visit to Edinburgh.

'A little more than two years has passed since I made my first visit here to be united to Mr. Shelley. To me they have been the happiest and longest years of my life.'¹ So wrote Harriet to Mrs. Nugent on the 20th October. Yet Jane, Lady Shelley, has recorded that 'Towards the close of 1813, estrangements, which for some time had been slowly growing between Mr. and Mrs. Shelley, came to a crisis.'² Did the rift in the lute make its appearance while they were in Edinburgh? Certainly Harriet's declarations (just quoted) are against the supposition that dissensions had arisen before 20th October; and a letter, postmarked 23rd November, to the same correspondent³ furnishes no hint of unhappiness. From this meagre but tangible evidence, it seems probable that prior to the return to London,⁴ which now became imperative because of the illness of Timothy Shelley, there had been no serious break between Shelley and Harriet; and that it was the fate of Edinburgh, from first to last, to bound the full cycle of their happiness.⁵

⁵ I have not thought it necessary to enter into a discussion of Hogg's 'love' for Harriet Shelley, which (we learn from Shelley's letter to Miss Hitchener, 14th November 1811) was the sequel of his meeting Harriet at Edinburgh in September, and which ended in the disgraceful proposals made to Harriet in Shelley's absence, at York in October; for so long as the Shelleys and Hogg remained in Edinburgh, there was at least no open disclosure of Hogg's perfidy.

ON THE ANTECEDENTS OF THE COLLEGE OF JUSTICE

IT is remarkable that the complex and interesting development which brought the Court of Session into being, and led to the incorporation and endowment of the College of Justice under James v., has never received very serious attention. That is largely due, no doubt, to the fact that the greater portion of the material is still in MS., and might occupy a close student for many years. Thomas Thomson was the pioneer in this as in other departments; but the work he did was not taken up by any successor, and historical effort was concentrated upon inquiries which seemed to have a prior claim.

The popular account of the matter appears to rest upon a statement by Sir George Mackenzie, who says in his Institutions that 'the present model was fixed and established by King James the Fifth after the model of the Parliament of Paris.' His observation, significantly ignored by Stair, was accepted by Erskine; and it has dominated the narratives of the general historians. Even the author of a standard work on the practice of the Court committed himself to the proposition in an untenable form, and sought to elaborate it in detail.¹

Mackenzie's statement had its origin, possibly, in the remarks of Mr. David Chalmer, an exiled Scottish judge, who wrote an historical compendium for the delectation of the French,² and recounted how James v. erected a court of Parliament sedentary at Edinburgh, begun previously in the time of

James IV. to administer justice after the fashion of the Parlement of Paris. In a subsequent tract Mr. Chalmer, who had gifts of imagination, conjectured that Aidan, King of Dalriada in the time of St. Columba, initiated the 'sessions' as they remained up to the reign of James IV. The latter king, he added, set up a body of councillors, half of them clerical and half laymen, with the chancellor at their head, empowered to judge without appeal, as were the councillors in the Parlement of Paris; James V., ratifying and confirming the erection, chose learned men and provided them with a reasonable sum for maintenance.¹ A comparison of the two accounts shows that Chalmer, who was personally acquainted with the work of the Session, did not represent James V., or even his father, as copying the Parlement of Paris. He drew attention to an analogy between two institutions which arose, to use modern language, out of differentiation of function in the curia regis.

The development which gave us the Court of Session is long and exceedingly complicated. It is matter for industrious inquiry by students qualified in both history and law. A matured account would have its proper place in a general treatise on the Court of Parliament, the relation of Parliament to other courts and councils, and the forms of summons and process observed in Scotland. We shall have to wait many years for anything of the kind. The investigation must be carried out in sections, along several lines of study, with final comparison and correction. The following paper is only a slight and tentative effort to indicate some of the problems and to present specimens of the material. It obviously leaves untouched many difficulties which await solution by specialists in law; and it attempts merely to show that the Court of Session was an institution which had an indigenous growth. No one will presume to deny the influence of French usage upon Scottish;² and there are those who suspect that the activity of the churchmen in civil affairs must have brought the Canon Law very powerfully to bear upon development. While we await the results of specialised inquiry, it may be interesting to have this bald and imperfect description of the stages by which the familiar institution grew.¹

THE SESSIONS OF JAMES I.

One of the first acts passed in Parliament by James I. upon his return from England related to the administration of justice. Officers throughout the realm should be men 'that can and may halde the law to the Kingis commonis' and persons of substance who might be fined for misconduct. If any were infest in jurisdictions which they could not exercise in person, they must make themselves responsible for competent deputies.² The act was reminiscent of an ordinance under David II. after his liberation in 1357;³ but in the case of James I. there seems to have been special embarrassment arising from a tendency to seek redress by direct resort to the Crown.

The first distinct indication of difficulty was the number of bills of complaint presented to Parliament. The problem was not new. In 1341 it was found necessary to appoint two auditors to hear and determine cases which had not been concluded;⁴ and the practice of appointing a commission of Parliament, which seems to have begun under David II., was doubtless connected with the amount of judicial business in the shape of civil causes coming up for decision. Now, in 1424, a solution was to be found by affirming the proper competence of the ordinaries. 'For divers caus belangand the common profyt of the realme' bills of complaint should be presented to the judges of the courts 'to quham thai pertene of law': the King should insist upon the impartial dispensation of justice, and should provide advocates for the poor: any judge who refused 'to do the law evinly' would be rigorously punished by the Crown, to which the complainer might have recourse.¹ An exposition of the 'divers caus' would have been of inestimable value, especially in view of the Act of 1425 dealing with cases which might be 'determynit befor the kingis consal.' It may be presumed, however, that 'consal' is used in the most comprehensive sense, including council general of the estates, and council in Parliament. Of this interpretation the actual expedient adopted by James seems to be confirmatory. It was his own project, for which he obtained parliamentary consent. A special court, consisting of the Chancellor with 'discret personis of the thre estatis' nominated by the King, was to sit three times in the year and determine these causes. The terms were to begin on 30th September, the Monday after Ash Wednesday, and 25th June. Evidently the court was intended to visit various centres at the discretion of the King; and he proposed to provide expenses from the unlaws and in 'uthir ways' unspecified.²

This scheme had the obvious advantage of combining clerical, baronial, and burgess experience; and in this respect it was an extension of the practice in General Council and Parliament, where the committee on civil causes habitually included representatives of the three estates. But it was not a committee directly appointed by the estates with the obligation to report. The judges were to be 'chosyn and depute be oure soverane lorde the King.' How far the act was an admission that the attempt to bring the ordinaries into fuller play was inadvisable cannot be stated. Possibly it contemplated a relief of Parliament, but more directly the freeing of the King and his immediate councillors from a heavy burden in view of the persistent tendency to seek royal justice. Stated courts at convenient places in the south, the centre, and the north would accelerate business in civil causes and would make the royal justice more readily available. Whether the judges were to be sworn we are not told; but it is noticeable that in 1427 the auditorial committee in Parliament was compelled to take oath.¹

There seems to be no evidence to show what was the result of the King's plan or how far it was put into practice. An ordinance of council under James II. in 1438 provided for 'twa Sessionis yerly,' in autumn and spring, indicating that the court had at least acquired a technical name. The judges were to be chosen, in theory, by the Crown; but instead of the Chancellor the Lieutenant was to act.² Again, however, information fails us.

In 1449 the enactment of James I. was renewed, with the single modification that the autumn term should not begin till after the Michaelmas sheriff-court.³ It is in 1456 that we have the first express reference to a difficulty which must have interfered with the success of these sessions. They involved a severe tax upon the time of members. A General Council in that year strongly urged the King to execute a plan whereby there should be during three months an assiduous court of auditors, to serve by three independent shifts. The judges were chosen, like the auditors of causes in Parliament or General Council, from each estate—three of the clergy, three of the barons, and three of the burgh commissaries. It was not possible for the auditorial committee in this General Council, which began in 19th October, to overtake all cases. The residue were to be continued to 8th November at Edinburgh; and there appears to have been no technical difficulty in regard to summonses. After the dissolution of the General Council the sitting seems to have been conceived as a continuation of auditorial functions by representatives of the three estates; the judges were styled 'auditouris': like the parliamentary auditors they were required to take oath. The court, though it began in Edinburgh, might pass at discretion to other centres.¹

In the following February we find it at Perth. Thomas Thomson describes a decret preserved in the Register of Scone as given in Parlamento: in reality the sentence seems to have been 'in public session' of these auditors in the tolbooth.² They are called 'our counsellors the auditors of causes and complaints . . . chosen by the three estates of our realm'; and the noticeable weakness of the burgess representation, with other indications, makes it almost certain that they were not the committee of a sitting Parliament. The fact that they are described as nominees of the estates, which conflicts with the statement that James I. selected the judges for the sessions, is not surprising. In 1456 the estates took the initiative in reviving a practice which was due originally to the personal action of the King.

The 'session' had now become a familiar though not as yet a permanent institution. James I. had conceived the idea, and had apparently chosen the judges from the three estates. At the present stage, in 1456, it was the estates in General Council, and more particularly the clergy, who recommended the Crown to develop the system and arranged for the monthly shifts. The Constable, an officer closely associated with formal assemblies, regarded 'the tyme of the sessione and generale consale and parliament' as an occasion for collecting perquisites.³ There was a distinct tendency to look upon the court as a committee depute by the King and the three estates, either in Parliament or in General Council, having power to determine without further reference to the constituent body.

The Parliament of 1457 proceeded along the same lines. It provided for 'lordis of the sessione' during the interval between this and the next Parliament. Aberdeen was to be the centre for forty days during the summer of 1458 : Perth for a like period in autumn : Edinburgh in the following spring. Nine auditors were appointed in each case, three clergy, three barons, and three burgesses, with due regard to the convenience of their territorial proximity to the place of meeting. The local sheriff would attend to undertake any charges imposed upon him by the court. Yet this expedient for the ministration of civil justice had a distinctly temporary appearance. The lords were expected to act ' of thar awne benevolence,' except for a half share of the forty shillings unlaw, because it might be seven years before they had to serve again. Such a suggestion is almost incredible, if these sessions had been contemplated as regular and permanent.¹

Evidently the development of the sessions was connected closely with the growth of the action of spuilzie.² An act of Council in December 1438 provided for access to the Lieutenant and the three estates when the sheriff did not do his duty in cases of spoliation.³ In the spring came the ordinance for ' twa sessionis yerly,' to be held by the Lieutenant and ' the Kyngis chosyn consal.'⁴ In 1449 a re-statement of the act was accompanied by a re-iteration of James I.'s ordinance for a court consisting of the Chancellor and discreet persons of the three estates.⁵ Now, in 1457, the Parliament in arranging for ' sessions ' to deal with all manner of civil actions not involving fee or heritage laid special emphasis upon complaints of spoliation. The lords of the session were to take up spuilzies done since 1st January 1449, the year in which the act anent spuilzie had been passed in Parliament ; but for twelve months they were to be accessible also to complaints of spoliations committed during the twelve or thirteen years between the Coronation (1437) and 1449. This was a practical admission that the ordinaries were unsatisfactory, and that there was need for a more effective administration of civil justice. The King and his council were authorised to arrange for additional sessions up to the meeting of next Parliament.¹

Two important points emerge in this ordinance. Decrees of the lords were to be final, 'but only remede of appellacione to the King or to the Parliament.' In respect of the induciae pursuers were to raise peremptory summons out of the King's chapel on forty days. There was an additional provision—not quite clearly expressed—relating to 'accionis done befor the proclamacione of this sessione.' In their case peremptory summons was possible upon fifteen days. What is most interesting to observe is that the session, while it does not supersede the ordinary judge, is accessible within its sphere of competence in the first instance and in point of finality is on a level with the King in Council or in Parliament. Both Parliament and General Council, as we have seen, were in the habit of appointing auditors of causes and complaints; ² James I. found it advisable to supplement this machinery by a bold extension of the auditorial system: his 'discreet personis of the thre estatis,' though appointed for a temporary purpose, were on the way to become a necessary institution, and were now, under James II., expressly invested with supreme powers. In 1460, according to the Auchinleck Chronicle, Parliament again ordained that sessions should be held. The expedient was still, however, of a temporary character, as may be seen by reference to enactments in 1464 and 1468.³

THE LORDS OF COUNCIL

The session ordained by the Parliament of 1468 is the last on record which followed the model initiated by James I. At this point there is a change, of which it is hard to determine the exact significance; for it is intimately connected with the obscure development of parliamentary institutions and the history of process. In October 1467 'al summondis and causis that is left undecidit in this parliament salbe decidit before the lordis of counsaile, the summondis standand as thai now do.'¹ The 'lordis of counsaile' were not the 'session,' since by the ordinance of 1468 vacancies on the two sessions of that year were to be filled by 'our sovereign lord and his consale.' The transference of undetermined causes from Parliament to Council in 1467 has the air of being unusual, and no matter of course. The surviving records do not enable us to say how far the expedient of 'sessions' was designed to cope with the overflow of civil actions from Parliament and General Council, or whether the Council attendant on the King came much into play. It is clear that James I. intended to free himself and his immediate councillors: if their movements were not hampered, the litigants would be put to trouble and expense in following them; and it may fairly be concluded that the 'sessions,' intermittent though they were, had at least arrested any tendency to resort to what we may style the Privy Council.

One thing at least is certain. From about the end of James II.'s reign, or the beginning of James III.'s, the mode of assembly known as consilium generale, which resembled Parliament in being a meeting of the three estates, tended to become more and more an enlarged Privy Council without the presence of the burgess element. It cannot be merely accidental that the last 'session' on the old model was ordained for November 1468, and that there was extant in the seventeenth century a volume of decreets which seems to have been the first of the Acta Dominorum Concilii, beginning in May 1469.² Sir Robert Spotiswood, President in 1633, noted the fact that 'the Session was at this time ambulatory, following the court.'³

³ Ibid., xcix.

There is additional evidence that the Council about the King was becoming a familiar resort for litigants. In 1466, so accustomed was the clerk to its activity, that in recording decreets of the lords auditors in Parliament he thrice writes 'lordis of consale' and as often corrects himself.¹ At this Parliament of 1466, too, a case was continued, to come on a fixed day before the King and his Council 'quhare it hapynnis his hienes to be for the tyme.' The clause often recurs, and indicates a difficulty which may have suggested the fixed local 'sessions' under James I. and James II. Continuation from Parliament to Council, as already observed, was not yet regarded as a matter of course: it is recorded that by consent of parties the Council was to have the full power of Parliament to decide the issue. So, too, in 1467 it was necessary to state that cases left by the parliamentary committee should be determined before the 'lordis of counsaile' without the issue of fresh summons.² Again, in 1471, when actions were continued to the day to which the house was adjourned, litigants were expressly permitted to 'tak new summondys til a schortar day befor the lordis of consaile.'³ This was a concession. The committee of auditors invariably continued cases to a day of Parliament, if there was commission to lords 'havand power,' and did not encourage application to the Council. In 1478 a suit involving a large sum of money was, on second thoughts, continued by them to the next Parliament.⁴

With the desuetude of the 'sessions' the standing Council about the King began anew to feel the burden of civil actions, and the old question of the ordinaries at once revived. In 1469 there was an article before the estates which was designed to relieve the pressure. A man must go to his ordinary and, if justice was done, 'remain content': if the judge refused to act or was 'partial,' he was entitled to bring the offender or the judge, as the case might be, before the King and Council.

⁴ Ibid., 63.

The King might exercise his usual prerogative and hear a case, but that depended upon his grace.¹ In 1474, with reference to this enactment, complainers were bidden go before their judges ordinary 'and vex nocht our soverane lorde nor his consale with na complayntis bot gif it be on officiaris that will nocht do justice.'²

Gradually the practice of continuing actions from the auditors in Parliament to the Council became familiar, and the clerk entered the date for the next hearing without specifying the court. At the close of a Parliament we sometimes find the court consisting of auditors and of 'lordis of counsale.'³ In 1478 an action familiar to the Council came before the auditors and was continued back again, partly on the ground of this familiarity and partly because some of the auditors had 'past thar way.'⁴

In continuing cases to the Council the parliamentary auditors had to name a date. Between 6th and 20th March 1478 they heard more than one hundred and thirty, of which forty were to come up again on 10th May; and the Council must either keep that day or disappoint litigants. The extreme pressure at this juncture led, as in the case of the 'daily council' in 1503, to duplication. Between 11th and 19th March 1478, auditors and Council sat concurrently. The whole situation pointed to adequate and stated sessions of Council as the next step in development. As yet the auditors could only appoint a date which might be convenient for the Council. There was no attempt to frame a 'table' or programme, so as to distribute the actions. A place was scarcely ever mentioned; and it went without saying that the court would be found where the King and his Council happened to be for the time. There is reason to suppose that parties were occasionally disappointed or at least put to trouble and expense. The most serious evil, however, lay in the fact that no precautions seem to have been taken by James III., as they had been under his predecessors, to consult the convenience of litigants distant from Edinburgh. James was notoriously remiss in respect of the itinerant justice courts;¹ and there appears to have been a similar failure of the council in respect of civil causes. The lapse of the old auditorial 'sessions,' which from time to time had visited Perth and Aberdeen, was accompanied by efforts to bring the ordinaries into play.² It is very significant that in 1487, at the end of the reign, direct resort to the council was narrowly restricted; and that the act was almost immediately repealed on the ground that 'it wer deferring of justice to mony partiis.'³ If we could be certain that the poem at the end of the Liber Pluscardensis was inspired by the abuses under James III.—and there is much to be said for the supposition—we should have a pointed criticism of the conditions: a corrupt and inefficient council, chosen without regard to the estates: ignorance and partiality among the ordinaries: no articulated system or proper division of labour: delay of justice to the poor: neglect in execution: discontent in every class.

THE LORDS OF COUNCIL AND SESSION

The irregularity of parliamentary assemblies and the inadequate machinery afforded by the council about the King certainly caused expense and delay for litigants of inconsiderable influence. Legislative efforts to bring the ordinaries into fuller play were ineffectual as ever. The council had frequently to resort to a general continuation of causes; and the speedy satisfaction of humbler applicants was not their first thought. It became customary, about this time, to except from general continuation actions of the King, of strangers, and of persons specially privileged by royal favour. The rest must await the convenience of the council.

The tendency to contamination between the parliamentary auditorial committee and the lords in attendance on the King appears in the first Parliament of James IV. It met on 6th October 1488; and on 17th October it was continued, or prorogued, to 14th January. The auditorial committee on civil causes was empowered by Parliament to sit till 26th October, and co-opt persons in place of any who departed. The personnel gradually altered, till the residuum of auditors was small and 'lords of council' predominated. On 27th October all actions had been decided; and it was intimated that hearing would be resumed on 14th January, the date to which Parliament was continued.¹ When the house reassembled, the usual committee of auditors was appointed; and members of that committee sat with 'lords of council' after the rest of the parliamentary business was concluded.

The Parliament which met on 3rd February 1489-90 marks an important epoch. There was to be a 'secret council,' for the forth-putting of the King's authority in the administration of justice.² This council of twenty-seven, including royal officers, was to be responsible to the King and to the three estates. Though there was a tacit reflection on the previous regime and an avowed determination to bring about reform, there is no sign of an intention to institute definite extra-parliamentary or special sessions for civil causes. The auditorial committee, with 'lords of council,' was to continue sitting for a week after the close of Parliament, with full powers.³ When the week lapsed, the sederunt on civil actions consisted of 'lords of council,' half of them members of the 'secret council,' including a few who had been parliamentary auditors, the rest neither privy councillors nor auditors. By the autumn it had been decided that regular 'sessions' of council were inevitable ; and we have a list of domini sessionis communiter electi.¹ There were sixteen, including the Chancellor ; and five did not belong to the 'secret council' appointed in spring. It was statute in the Parliament of May 1491 that the Chancellor 'with certain lordis of consale or ellis the lordis of sessione' should sit during three terms,² to begin on the days named in 1425-6 under James I. The language apparently means that the 'lords of council' selected for the work are otherwise (alias) and specifically 'lords of session.' They were not, however, chosen from or, it would seem, by the 'secret council.' In the absence of full evidence it is impossible to verify the natural conjecture that they were named by a 'general council,' a form of meeting which in this period had come to mean a privy council strongly reinforced by other lords rapidly summoned for special consultation. What is important to notice is that, whereas the 'sessions' initiated by James I. were representative of the three estates and modelled on the auditorial committee in Parliament, the 'lords of session' of James IV. approximate to the character of privy councillors and depart from the older model found in the parliamentary committee of auditors. The domini sessionis of 1490 were exclusively clergy and barons ; the burghs were now no longer represented.

Mr. David Chamber, or Chalmer, an ordinary lord of session after Mary's return to Scotland, who is sometimes quoted in support of the statement that James V.'s foundation was modelled on the Parlement of Paris, is much nearer the truth than our modern writers. He specifies the reign of James IV. as the period in which the institution first took shape ;³ but he would have been justified in pointing out that the activity in civil causes of the council about the King, as witnessed by a register of decreets, can be traced back to 1469,¹ and that the new development in 1490 was itself a stage in the evolution. The current view, which tends to regard James v. as an imitative creator, has been encouraged by the arbitrary titles given to the extant volumes of record, when they were bound in the nineteenth century. From 1478 to 1532 the books stand as Acta Dominorum Concilii: those which begin from the foundation of the College of Justice in the latter year and bifurcate somewhat confusedly into a Register of the Privy Council and a Register of Acts and Decrees are styled Acta Dominorum Concilii et Sessionis. The 'Lords of Council and Session' begin to act in 1490, and are the result of detailing a body of 'lords of council' to give their special attention to civil causes.

Though sessions of council had now been adopted as an expedient to deal with the administration of civil justice, there was still much indefiniteness and uncertainty. Parliaments continued to appoint a committee of auditors chosen in the time-honoured fashion from the three estates; and when the house rose there was the same tendency to employ a joint body of auditors and council shading off gradually into 'lords of council.' The old question came up for discussion. In view of the steady increase in the number of cases brought up, was it possible for the councillors about the King, or any section of them, to overtake the business? Should a fresh effort not be made to provide for efficient ordinaries? As one result we have the so-called 'Education Act' of 1496, to which much eloquence has been devoted without regard to its special significance. It provided that the heirs of barons and freeholders should be put to school and university in anticipation of their duties as judges, 'that the pure pepill suld have na neid to seik our soverane lordis principale auditouris for ilk small iniure.'² The act could have no immediate effect on the administration of justice; but it suggested a remedy for over-centralisation and congestion.

The nature of the difficulty, which had been present to the mind of James I., becomes more apparent under James IV. There were comparatively few lords available for much varied business. On 13th February 1490-1 the council had to turn to affairs of exchequer: it expected diplomatic debates in Lent: its next 'session,' or fixed term for civil causes, was to begin on 3rd March; the justice-ayres would have to be postponed.¹ Parliament, called for April, had to be adjourned till May. A permanent order was scarcely attainable. The uncertain movements of the King, sudden digressions, and unforeseen preoccupations must have given cause for serious complaint.

It was in 1495 that James and his councillors set themselves to consider expedients, and produced regulations which were partly temporary, partly of the nature of acts of sederunt. James held that the confusion and delay, involving litigants in unnecessary expense, were due to the practice of summoning all to the council for the same day. A programme was to be drawn up, at the rate of eight cases per diem; and the clerks of Chancery and Signet were to attend, issue summons, and 'mak table.' When a 'session' had begun, no new summons could be issued, except for production of witnesses. Two special provisions indicated that the congestion was not altogether the fault of the council. If parties did not compear to pursue on the day appointed, the lords would proceed to accept protestations; and frivolous prosecutions were to be discouraged by a vigorous imposition of the statutory unlaws.²

Evidently the government had to deal with a nice problem. Resort to the council must not be too easy; discontent in the country, on the other hand, must be appeased. Some one suggested combining the civil activities of the council with the work that some of the lords were required to do in attendance on the justice-ayres. This was in a way to revive civil business at the ayres, which were now almost exclusively concerned with criminal matters. Progress on circuit would bring justice within easy reach of people in remote districts: time would be saved: the council would be relieved. The opportunity to air grievances was eagerly seized. James was at Inverness on 5th February 1497-8, and continued civil actions to Elgin, with intimation that unfinished cases should be brought before him and his council while they were north of the Month. He had to be at Aberdeen on 3rd March, when some of the litigants were invited to attend the ayre at Dundee. At Bervie, on 5th March, a similar invitation was rendered inevitable by lack of time. At Cupar-Fife, on 2nd May, some northern actions were still unheard: they must come up at Stirling; and at Stirling causes from part of the realm where 'sessionis and justice ayre' had been held were continued to Edinburgh, or where the King and council might chance to be, for a date in June.¹

By the time the council reached Edinburgh the situation was ridiculous. The lieges had already been put to 'laubour and travel,' and they could not be dragged round the ayres of the south. Notwithstanding the ordinance of a General Council initiating the unfortunate experiment, it was decided that the chancellor and lords of council should remain in the capital. 'For ese of his legis in tyme to cum,' and until he was further advised, James promised to arrange for 'sessions' at Aberdeen and Perth in due season, while he notified litigants in the south that they must come to Edinburgh.² By 18th July the lords had dealt with all actions raised before 8th June, and were free to appoint a 'session' at Perth for 4th October, a second at Aberdeen a month later, and a third at Edinburgh in the following January.³

This scheme, however, conflicted with the justice-ayres, and broke down in its turn. In September the parties who expected to be heard at Perth were postponed to January, and must come to Edinburgh: those of the north had to put up with a delay of four, and finally six months, and the hardship of travelling to the capital or where the King and council happened to be.¹

It is unnecessary to pursue further the results of this haphazard system. The King, as the records show, strove hard to prevent the breakdown of civil justice. On 14th January 1502-3 a 'session general' was to open at Edinburgh.² On 27th March actions raised since the beginning of this session were continued to 12th June, 'becaus the Kingis hienes is sa gretly lauborit in his proper persone in til the materis of the sessione, and als the ald summondis may straitlye be ended betwix this and the feist of pasche that last was.'³ By 4th April hearings were concluded, and there could be a vacation. About the end of May, however, it was found that exchequer business would demand attention on 12th June, and people would be preparing for the marriage with Margaret Tudor. There could be no 'session' till November.⁴

After his wedding James set himself to arrange for this November session. The shires were grouped in five divisions, and the time of the court was mapped out so that all the cases might be heard before Christmas. The plan was inadequate. At the Parliament of March 1503-4, a 'daily council' was instituted as a new expedient to remedy the congestion.

THE DAILY COUNCIL

'It is avisit statute and concludit in this present parliament, becaus thair has bene greit confusioun of summondis at ilk sessioun sa that laser nor space at a tyme of the yeir mycht nocht have bene had for the ending of thame, and tharthrou pure folkis has bene delayit and deferrit fra yeir to yeir throw the quhilk thay wantit justice, that tharfor for eschewing of the said confusioun thair be ane consale chosin be the kingis hienes quhilk sall sitt continually in Edinburgh or quhar the King makis residence or quhar it plesis him, to decide all maner of

summondis in civile materis complantis and caussis dayly as thai sall happin to occur, and sall have the samin power as the lordis of session ; and quhen thai sall begin and in quhat place salbe notifiyt to the pepill be oppin proclamatioun at the Kingis plesour.'¹

So runs the Act of Parliament ; and the historians, taking it at its face value, have developed the current myth that this 'daily council' superseded the 'session' of James IV. and was the civil court until 1532. It would have saved trouble and misapprehension if they had investigated the facts. The very same Parliament ordained that the 'session' should continue its work on the basis of the county grouping instituted by James in the previous autumn, and the lords were named.² Beyond all doubt the 'daily council' was a supplementary device, intended to relieve the 'session' by overtaking some judicial business during vacation, serving the more remote districts as the King moved about, or actually coming to its aid in Edinburgh. Clear proof of this last function appears in the spring of 1504-5 ; for between 20th February and 3rd March there were days on which the 'lords of session' and the 'King's council' met independently and concurrently to hear civil causes. The minutes of 'session' are in the hand of the usual clerk : those of the 'King's council,' at which James was always present, are also entered in the Acta Dominorum Concilii, but by a different writer. On two occasions, 25th and 28th February, Bishop Elphinstone seems to have been present for a time at both courts : apart from him the personnel in each case was distinct. The 'lords of council,' in fact, were acting in two divisions.³

In spite of these joint efforts, the sheriffdoms north of Perth and Forfar had to be postponed on 26th April to a meeting at Aberdeen a month later, and were eventually called to Edinburgh in July. James seems to have concentrated his attention upon accelerating the work of the 'session.' He was very frequently present in person. The nature of the record makes it difficult to determine whether the itinerant activity during the next few years was undertaken technically by the 'lords of session' on tour with the King or by the 'daily council.' On the whole the 'session of the lords' seems now to have been regarded as a function of council exercised in Edinburgh at more or less stated times. In 1508, for example, James and some of his lords were hearing causes at Jedburgh—possibly on the occasion of a justice-ayre; and an adjournment was ordered to Edinburgh for the 'session' before Yule.¹ Taking the minutes for 1507 and 1508, we find that procedure was as follows: 'session' at Edinburgh from 20th November to 20th December 1507, and from 7th January to 18th March, when there was adjournment to 20th July 1508: in the interval cases came up at Dundee, Edinburgh, Stirling, and again at Edinburgh: on 6th July the lords sat in exchequer; on 15th July the impending 'session' was continued to 6th November; but privileged actions crop up intermittently, and decreets were given in October at Wigton—just after the justice-ayre, as the surviving justiciary record shows. We shall not be far wrong in supposing that the 'daily council,' so ambitiously begun, dwindled into a somewhat uncertain convenience for litigants in the provinces, chiefly in connexion with the criminal circuits.

The supposition is strengthened by an ordinance of 22nd February 1508-9, when ample and definite terms of 'session' were prescribed: 15th April to 15th August, and 18th October to 1st March. This calendar, however, could not be observed. On 17th December 1509 the lords rose in the midst of Kincardine actions, and announced that the northern districts (always a great difficulty) would be served at the time of their justice-ayres. Distance and poor communications continually raised problems. The lords might assemble in Edinburgh, and find few litigants in attendance: ² if they departed, there might be clamour. At one juncture James consented to proclaim a special 'session' for the disappointed, warning them that protestations would be accepted in the event of non-compearance, 'because it has bene oft continuit and delay of before.'¹

Up to this point, unfortunately, we have no descriptive document to give us a glimpse into the interior of the council-house when civil actions were being heard. Suddenly, however, in 1511 we come upon an ordinance made by James IV. in his desire to accelerate business, of such interest that it deserves to be quoted in full. It relates to the 'session' which is resuming operations at Edinburgh in July, after an interval of continuation. According to the arrangement by counties, cases from south of Forth are coming up, 'tabulit apoun the tolbuith dure,' to be followed by actions from some northern shires.

'We do yow to wit that the Kingis grace with awis of his consale for gude reule to be kept in consale hous and expedition of caus that cumis before thaim to be discussit, quhilkis ar gretly stoppit and hinderit throu multitud of peple that cumis in the consale hous makand gret noys and misreule, has devisit and ordanit for al tyme to cum that this reule be kept, that is to say : at the entre of my lord chancelar or president for the tyme, that nane entir in the consale hous bot thaim that ar apoun the consale or thaim that beis commandit be my lord chancelar or president ; and eftir thar entre that the masar stand in the consale hous dur, haldand it oppyn, and that na man entir thar quhile the said masar schew that sic a man is thar and bring him ansuer thar apoun ; and gif ony man cumis in without licens or agane the masaris vil that he dois in the contrar, sal pas and entir his person incontinent in ward in the castall and thair remane for his contemption quhill he be lousit be the Kingis graic ; and giff the said masar lattis ony entir bot command of the lordis, that he sall incur the samyn ; and quhen ony parteis enteris to pley, that the principale party and thar advocat sale entir with thaim without ony ma personis bot giff thai optene licens to a frend or twa to entir with thaim to gif

James IV. never succeeded in putting the administration of civil justice on a satisfactory footing. To the end of his reign the lords were struggling ineffectually with persistent arrears. It was almost impossible to maintain adequate 'sessions' with the men who were available or the time at disposal. The extant justiciary record for this period,² upon which Pitcairn drew in compiling his Criminal Trials, relates only to the south of Forth; but with the aid of the Treasurer's Accounts we gain some conception of the very considerable time which the justice-ayres occupied during the year. James IV. held these courts with diligence, in contrast to his father, under whom their desuetude was a scandal. The plan of taking civil actions at the time and place of the ayres was obviously convenient, because officers and others necessary to both courts could not be in two places at once. The government, unable to provide for adequate 'sessions' in Edinburgh, oscillated between a centralised court and the itinerant system. It is significant that after the losses at Flodden it was needful, in order to maintain a standing council, that some criminal work appropriate to the justice-ayres should be devolved temporarily upon sheriffs and stewards.³ Besides the ayres there was the exchequer. The 'lords of session,' too, though chosen specially for a particular function, were none the less—perhaps owing to their comparative assiduity even so much the more—also 'lords of council,' and liable to be diverted suddenly to affairs of state. After the endowment of the Session in 1532 as a separate court, we find James V.

continuing for convenience to use the senators as 'lords of council' in business which had no connexion with their special commission.

AFTER FLODDEN

The death of James IV., losses in the field, and the parlous state of Scotland, arrested a process of differentiation begun by the practice of naming 'lords of council' who were also to be 'lords of session.' Had it not been for Flodden and its consequences we should doubtless have had independent registers of Privy Council and of Session before the reign of Mary. The editor of the suppressed volume of Parliamentary Records (1804) found so many affairs of state treated in the Acta Dominorum Concilii for the period after 1513 that he printed a section of the register under the misapprehension that the proceedings were parliamentary. Thomas Thomson, who intervened, decided to print in his folio Acts of Parliament nothing but what was parliamentary,¹ and to extract from the Acta Dominorum such matter as was of a privy council character, to be published by way of introduction to the independent Register of the Privy Council, which opened in 1545, leaving aside the decreets in civil causes as matter related to the activity of the lords in 'session.' This policy was a logical anticipation of the results which were to follow from the growing differentiation of function which we have been observing in the council. Unfortunately the supplementary volume never came. Joseph Robertson, who was responsible for the publication of the Register of the Privy Council, now so far advanced, began with the independent register of 1545; and to this day some of the most important material relating to the reign of James V. remains in MS., neglected by Scottish and, as is natural, by English historians.

The Acta Dominorum Concilii after Flodden, therefore, must be clearly understood to contain mixed matter. Under James IV. the minutes are almost exclusively devoted to recording decreets in civil causes and business relating to this branch of activity. What happened to the record of proceedings in affairs of state is a puzzle which need not at present detain us. The point of importance now is the arrest, as we have seen, of the differentiating process and the marked shrinkage of the capacity to deal independently with two distinct classes of business. The council was in fact so much taken up by public affairs that civil justice suffered. On 9th January 1513-14 a 'session' had been appointed; but the lords were occupied with 'greit materis concerning the gude of the realme' and 'nicht nocht vaik tharapone.'¹ The whole burden of affairs fell on a sadly diminished company. On 25th February the indefatigable chancellor, Archbishop James Betoun, announced to the lords who threatened to depart that he, for one, would remain.

It is no accident that the lords who were chosen on the arrival of the regent Albany, and who almost immediately began a 'session,' were described as electi ad consilium.² Their duties in the decision of civil actions were subordinated to acrimonious discussion about the vacant sees and other questions of state. When Albany departed for France in the summer of 1517, he appointed seven vice-regents, who were sworn to minister justice. These men proceeded almost at once to issue a proclamation relating to civil causes. In the interest of persons 'abiding lang upon calling of thair summondis in the cessioun,' and to avoid confusion 'throw multitude of pepill concurring all at anis'—an evil which we saw that James IV. sought to remedy—the realm was to be quartered for separate diets. The south-east, including

Linlithgow as well as Edinburgh, would be taken between 22nd June and 12th July: the south-west, with Stirling, from 13th July: to be followed by the central shires and, after an interval between 20th August and 30th September, the northern, which would occupy the first three weeks of October. The pursuer was to keep the diet of the defender, or of the principal and first-named defender. The 'tabler,' arranging all the cases in his book on this plan, was to inform the lords, so that they might prorogue a diet and adjust subsequent proceedings to the alteration. He was not to accept a fresh case after the third day of any diet.¹

The scheme was no more successful than its predecessors. Civil commotions no doubt contributed to its failure. The lords announced that they were always prepared to hear 'privileged' suits;² but on 22nd February 1517-18 it was admitted that civil justice had been delayed since the regent's departure; and it was suggested that Parliament should appoint lords to remain after the dissolution. The chancellor and lords 'chosin for the sessioun' proposed to stay in town and hear actions, sitting from eight till eleven in the forenoon and from two to four in the afternoon, and following the arrangement by diets. Arran's expedition to the Merse after the murder of La Bastie intervened to cause fresh obstruction.³ Indeed, the exigencies of state and unforeseen accidents constantly interrupted systematic procedure. In 1519, for instance, the court adjourned owing to the demand of exchequer, which might not 'gudely stand with the sessioun,' and because of a threatened outbreak of pestilence in Edinburgh and Leith.⁴

Though the 'table' or order of hearing had been in operation for some years, neither the lords nor the parties were punctilious in observing it. In 1522 the 'lords of council and session' insisted upon regularity. They assigned various classes of actions to particular days of the week. Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday were appropriated to the 'privileged table':¹ Wednesday to the King's business: Friday and Saturday to the 'common table.' Cases continued to next 'session' must be entered in the programme; but if continuation were 'within the tyme of the sett of the sessioun' no tabling was necessary.²

SPECIALISATION OF FUNCTION

In 1524, when Albany ceased to be governor, there is no sign of any body of men who are to be 'of council' with special regard to work on the 'session.' We have a list of twenty-eight, prelates, earls, barons, lesser clergy and officers, who have been selected to sit on the 'session' and upon 'all matters of counsel' concerning the King.³ But in February 1525-6 certain persons are chosen to reinforce the secret council for an impending session—four or five ecclesiastics who are evidently men of law, and four barons, one or two at least with qualifications for the work.

'The lordis has chosin thir persouns undir writin to be adjoinit with the lordis of the secrete counsale and ministeris of court to sitt apoun this nixt sessioun: that is to say the abbot of Cambuskyneth, [the dene of Glasgow de mandato cancellarii],⁴ the officiale of Sanctandrois, the officiale of Abirdene, and the officiale of Dunblane for the spirituale estaite, and for the temporall estaite the lord Erskin, the lord Hay of Yestir, the lard of Balwery, and the lard of Keir; and to begin the xix. day of this instant moneth of Februarii.

It is not to be supposed that this composite body, or even the greater part of it, sat regularly for civil causes. The court was sometimes very near debility. Important affairs brought out a larger attendance ; but occasionally the sederunt was considered inadequate. Thus on 12th December 1526 the King writes desiring the continuation of a certain case because it ' is gret and wichty and requiris ane gret sete of our lordis.' ²

Demands for a more assiduous court were now becoming insistent. In January 1526-7 the 'session' had to be adjourned till 11th March ; and the only concession offered to litigants was that cases specially excepted from the continuation would be taken ' with the aris as tyme of sessioun.' ³ An important document, presented on 13th March, tacitly admitted dissatisfaction with the prevailing system.

This document is followed by a letter of some interest. In the previous summer Parliament had declared that James, now aged fourteen, should have his authority royal in his own hands. He was himself immediately exposed to 'inopportune solicitation'; and it is apparent that his counsellors thought it necessary to make a stand. He was no doubt told that he must not interfere arbitrarily with the action of the session. Very probably his youth and inexperience, just when the functions of council in civil causes were being found to require the establishment of an assiduous and specialised court, fostered a corporate and professional spirit already engendered during a long minority, and soon to be exhibited in the contention of council that new members should be approved before admission.

'Lordis of counsale, we are informit ther is divers our writingis present before yow in hindering of justice and agane our mynd send yow in writt be our secretar this last Wednisday the xiii. day of Marche. In the summer of 1528 Angus, who had been chancellor for about a year, gave place to Gavin Dunbar, Archbishop of Glasgow, formerly the King's preceptor and one of the men destined to be closely associated with the project of a College of Justice. In November James approved a list of twenty-one persons 'to remane continually upon the session' and 'to vaik upon the chancelar daily.'¹ It is in November or December, probably, that we ought to place an undated royal letter of great importance.²

The history of the Privy Council in Scotland, in its earlier stages, is a subject which awaits an industrious student. The course of events since 1513, however, already indicates that the lords of council, acting as representative of the prevailing political faction at a time when the authority of the Crown was intermittent or feeble, developed a strong sense of their importance in administration. Their functions in ‘session’ and in exchequer, also, were now felt to demand special qualifications. Our next document, therefore, which bears closely upon the history of the Privy Council, also serves to suggest some explanation of the practice whereby the lords of council took upon themselves to ‘admit’ a new colleague.

‘In presens of the lords of counsale comperit James Colville of Uchiltre and producit ane writing subscrivit be the Kingis henes, desirand the lordis to admitt the said James to be ane of the sessioun, chekkir, generale counsale, and all utheris tymis as accordis, and to adjune him therto with the saidis lordis. THE COLLEGE OF JUSTICE

In the summer of 1529 a Scottish envoy appeared at Brussels, to confer on a marriage between James v. and the Dowager of Hungary, sister of the Emperor Charles v.² This was a new departure in foreign policy brought about by a variety of circumstances. The Emperor had beaten the French decisively at Pavia, and had now ousted them from Italy: Pope Clement VII. was at his mercy: both Francis I. and Henry VIII. were compelled by the threat of overweening power to cultivate more friendly relations. Scotland could not look to France for effective help, if the English became aggressive: she could obtain it in the present condition of international affairs only by courting the friendship of Charles v., who was irritated by Henry's proceedings against Katharine of Aragon. The financial state of James v., which had suffered from the acquisitive propensities of the regent Albany and the peculations of less considerable persons, was another incentive. That might be retrieved by a wealthy marriage. If the Dowager of Hungary failed, there was Katharine de' Medici, niece of Clement VII. and a near relative of Albany : if neither lady was available, and it should be necessary to obtain the papal authority for an ecclesiastical subsidy in Scotland, the Emperor was the man to procure it. Albany was in a difficult position. He might be expected to take a hand in clearing off the financial deficit for which he was so largely responsible ; but Francis I. had no mind to see Katharine bestowed in Scotland. The final issue from this tangle of diplomatic interests was surprising. Erskine of Haltoun, the secretary of King James, appeared in Rome during the spring of 1530-1 with instructions which seem to have been left for Albany to carry into execution. On 13th September 1531 Clement VII. issued a bull, narrating the desire of James to found a college for the ministration of civil justice. The King had no money to spend, and requested that the prelates should be asked to contribute a permanent subsidy of 10,000 ducats auri de camera—equivalent to £10,000 Scots. That subsidy the bull imposed. The executors included, significantly enough, Archbishop Gavin Dunbar, the chancellor, and Alexander Stewart, Bishop of Moray, Albany's half-brother.

There can be little doubt that Dunbar knew of the proposal to endow an assiduous court by papal authority and at the expense of the church ; but whether he was fully aware of the instructions which Erskine carried to Rome is another matter. The complicated wrangle which followed upon Clement's grant cannot be discussed here. It is possible that James and his lay advisers stole a march upon the ecclesiastics ; and that Dunbar expected the liability of the prelates to consist in assigning benefices in their patronage—a simple and inexpensive course compared with a heavy and direct tax upon their own emoluments. However that may be, it is more important at present to observe, in a royal letter which the chancellor read to the council while the secretary was on his way to Rome, some anticipation that assiduity, at least from a section of the lords in session, was about to be secured, as well as a specially qualified court.

‘Forsamekle as be multitude of lordis ingyrand thaim indifferently in tymes bigane to have voit in the sessioun and in decisioun of civile materis ther has bene baith gret confusioun and stop in the doing of justice and na ordour kepit therin, for eschewing herof and to put all thingis in bettir form we have ordanit and ordanis the lordis spirituale and temporale and uthir persouns of cuning, knowlege, and undirstanding quhais names eftir followis to have voit in the sessioun and in decisioun of all materis that concernis therto and nane utheris, and that the prelatis and temporale lordis be bot present at ther plesour, and that the remanent be daly with our chancelar and be sworne to determe and decyde in all actiouns cuming befor thaim eftir ther connyng and knowlege.’

It is unnecessary to draw attention to the definite limitation of personnel in this letter: the demand for regular attendance made upon the lesser ecclesiastics and temporal persons, with the King’s officers: the specification of fourteen as a suitable minimum in sederunt: the admission of learners in ‘practik.’ A regular quorum was most difficult to procure. On 12th December 1531 thirty-eight were named for the session:

¹ i.e. ‘out of.’ On 13th Nov. 1531 the matters which might be taken out of the order of table were ‘recent spulze, declaracioun of redemptioun of landis, reducing of lettres inordourlie procedit, and summondis that ar continewit be actis in the bukis of counsale or with consent of party and acts of adiornale, transferring of decretis, tynsale of superioriteis of thame that ar chargit be the actis of parliament to entir to ther landis, summondis that ar deliverit be the lordis to have the natour of recent spulze.’

twelve sat next day ; and thereafter we find great irregularity, the attendance on one occasion dropping to five. About a week before the parliamentary act anent the College of Justice, in May 1532, Campbell of Loudoun complains of the persons chosen that they 'ar now present in this toun and abstrakis thame self to decid on the mater movit betuix the maister of Glencarne and him' ; and James hands a list to his chancellor requiring presence at Holyrood and a decret without more ado.¹

The foundation and endowment of the College of Justice was the inevitable end of a long development. The men nominated in the Act of Parliament² were, with the exception of the Abbot of Cambuskenneth, president in the absence of the chancellor, in most cases men indicated in the royal letter read by Gavin Dunbar in 1530-1 as those from whom special assiduity would be demanded—lesser clergy and barons, and certain officers of the Crown. Yet the Lords of Session, now endowed for a particular function, were still also Lords of Council and Session. The Acta Dominorum Concilii after 1532 show that they were consulted occasionally on Privy Council business, and were constantly mingling in sederunt with lords who were not of the Session. The members of the College of Justice were learned in the law ; but as a rule they were not men enjoying great power and place among churchmen or feudal aristocrats. One of the objects of endowment, as we have seen, was to secure a regular nucleus of qualified judges. Their complete segregation from other activities of Council was not contemplated, and was indeed impossible. Conservative feeling in the great ecclesiastical and temporal lords was naturally disinclined to break with the established order ; and it was probably because of this feeling, in the main, that a certain number of 'extraordinary' lords were subsequently introduced to leaven the lump. This was, in reality, no more than partially to restore that element from among the magnates which was present before differentiation of function had advanced so far. An analysis of the foundation, however, and a discussion of the curious historical questions which remain as yet unanswered—and even unasked—would be beyond the proper limits of this paper.

THE TAILORS' HALL, COWGATE

PART I.—THE RECORDS

THE Tailors' Hall is, next to the Magdalen Chapel, the most important of surviving buildings in Edinburgh connected with the corporate life of her trade corporations, the history of which can be followed from the late mediaeval period downwards. The Chapel has already furnished material for a paper, similar to the one here offered, that was published in volume viii. of the Book of the Old Edinburgh Club, and the matter of both papers, of the paper on the Chapel and the present one on the Hall, will ultimately be incorporated in the Report on the older monuments of Edinburgh in preparation by the Royal Commission on Ancient Monuments in Scotland. The Magdalen Chapel was once the home of the Hammermen's Incorporation of Edinburgh; the Tailors' Hall, as its name implies, belonged to and was the seat of the corporate life of the Incorporation of Tailors. In each case the object in view in the antiquarian study has been to investigate, not the history of the guild itself, but only that of its buildings and its possessions of a material kind. Monumental history cannot, however, be dissociated from that of the men and women and the corporate bodies for whom the monuments were constructed and fitted up, and whose needs and ways of life in general conditioned the location, the form, and the furnishings of the structures. Hence it has been necessary to devote all possible attention to the original records concerning these Incorporations, as it is often the case that through formal entries or passing phrases in these we are able to acquire trustworthy evidence as to the construction and the modifications of the various buildings which the Incorporations owned and used.

In both cases under consideration considerable documentary evidence exists. A large number of old Minute Books from the fifteenth century onwards were placed in our hands by the kindness of representatives of the old Hammermen's Incorporation, and were made the basis of the former paper. In the case now before us, the law agents of the Incorporation of Tailors, Messrs. Wishart and Sanderson, W.S., 23 Rutland Street, have been so kind as to secure for us the use of a substantial body of original documents, the property of their clients. These consist in part of old Minute and Cash Books of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, and in part of original deeds on parchment and paper of the centuries from the fifteenth to the eighteenth. It needs hardly to be said that to read and interpret early documents of the kind often involves expert knowledge in palaeography and law, and in this connection we have been extremely fortunate. Out of the whole large number of original documents some sixty were selected as having a possible bearing on the history of the Hall, and a consultation with Mr. William Angus, Keeper of the Historical Department at the General Register House, resulted in a very kind offer on his part to read and analyse the records on our behalf. For this most valuable assistance we offer him our very cordial thanks.

Certain of these charters and other documents have been printed in the Extracts from Edinburgh Records,¹ in Reg. Mag. Sig., in Laing's Charters of the Collegiate Church of St. Giles,² and Colston's Incorporated Trades of Edinburgh,³ and to some extent the history of the 'Tailor Craft,' as the early records call the Incorporation, can be followed on these printed pages. One of our deeds, dated in 1475, mentions 'the Altar of St. Anne situated on the south side of the Choir of the Collegiate Church of St. Giles of Edinburgh, founded by the deacon and members of the Tailor Craft of the burgh,'¹ and there are several entries relating to revenues from land in Edinburgh for the support of this altar. It is possible that traces may remain to this day, for in the east wall of the southern choir aisle are indications of a former altar, and it was one of about fifty altars, many of them belonging to trade guilds, with which pre-Reformation St. Giles' was furnished.²

There may here be mentioned two other points of connection between the craft and St. Anne. In 1554 the Comendator of Holyrood grants to the Tailors of the Burgh of the Canongate Letters of Incorporation which provide for 'augmentation of divine service at ane altar biggit within our said Abbey, quhair Sanct An, thair patrone now stands.'³ Furthermore, the Tailors occupied in later days almost the whole of a steep street called St. Anne's Street,⁴ which ran down immediately to the west of the North Bridge and joined Princes Street with the parallel line of Canal Street below, and they may have given the street the name of their patron saint.

What we desire to learn is the history of the existing buildings or their predecessors belonging to the Tailor Craft in the Cowgate, and we are able to learn something of the land they occupy before the Tailors possessed it, and of the first establishment upon it of the Craft. This retrospect brings to us a vision of a time when to the south of St. Giles' and between the ridge of the High Street and the Cowgate there were no Parliament Halls, Law Courts and Public Offices, Advocates' and S.S.C. Libraries, but a large part of the space these now occupy was open churchyard, that appears from what our documents tell us to have reached to the Cowgate itself.¹ Within this space, which is referred to more than once in the deeds as 'the laiche kirk yaird' of 'St. Giles Kirk,' 'St. Geill,' or 'St. Geilly,' there stood a chapel, called 'the Chapel of the Crucifixion,' or 'of the Holy Rood' or 'the Rude Chapell,' founded shortly after Flodden by Walter Chepman of Ewirland, burgess of Edinburgh and Edinburgh's first printer, the site of which is said to correspond approximately with that of the present Reading Room for outside students in the Advocates' Library (Ordnance Map of c. 1850). Walter Chepman is commemorated by the Chepman aisle, or rather chapel, in St. Giles', where is the tomb of Montrose.

According to a charter of 1528 printed in full in Laing's Charters of St. Giles', p. 227 f., Chepman granted for the support of a secular chaplain in charge of his recently erected chapel a tenement of land on the south side of the Cowgate 'near the foresaid chapel' that is described as bounded by 'the land of the late James Lam,² burgess of Edinburgh, on the east, the land of the late John Abir . . . on the west, the arable lands called Wawanis Croft on the south, and the said Kowgait on the north.' The Cowgate runs, of course, still on its ancient line. The arable lands we may imagine occupying the site of the western part of Chambers Street, with perhaps a portion of the northern slope towards the Cowgate, and as

Societie of Brewaris'—an interesting notice locating the brewing industry on a site it has ever since occupied. Where exactly the eastern and western boundaries ran it might be possible with the aid of old feu charters and other such deeds to ascertain; for the moment it may be sufficient to note that the property to the west changed hands more than once in the next few decades. Anthony Busschet, a Frenchman but a burgess of Edinburgh, had it in 1536, and in 1588 it passed in whole or in part to Cuthbert Mathesoun, weaver, and his wife, but in 1604 it belonged to John Nicholson, whose trade of candlemaking connects him naturally with the locality, for Candlemaker Row still exists a few hundred yards away. At this date, 1604, Chepman's property adjoining Nicholson's on the east passes into the hands of the Cowpars of Gogar, represented by Adam Cowpar and Margaret Davidsonn¹ his spouse. The deed, an Extract from the Books of Council and Session, gives us some interesting information. Chepman's Cowgate property, it will be remembered, was set apart by the Charter of 1528 for the support of his Chapel of the Holy Rood in the cemetery of St. Giles'. This chapel, however, in 1604 no longer existed, for after the Reformation it was taken down, apparently about 1561 (Cameron Lees, p. 140), and the stones of it used for rebuilding the Tolbooth at the north-western corner of the church, so famous in after history and romance. Accordingly in the deed of 1604 it is referred to as 'the Halierude chapell *sumtyme situat*² in the laiche kirk yaird of St. Geilly Kirk in Edinburgh.' The deed is given in the Calendar of the Laing Charters as No. 1468: '1st, 15th, 28th June 1604. Charter by Mr. Richard Kene, writer, Edinburgh, son and heir of the late Mr. John Kene, writer, Edinburgh, with consent of Jonet Strang, his mother, and of James Mowat, writer of the secretary's register in the shires of Aberdeen and Kincardin, chaplain of the holy rood chapel formerly situated in the lower part of the cemetery of St. Giles Church, Edinburgh, superior of the subjects disponed, also with consent of John Johnstoun, patron of the said chaplainry, lawful son of the late John Johnstoun, writer and clerk of council and session, selling and disponing to Adam Couper of Gogar, Margaret Dennistoun, his spous, their heirs, etc., a tenement of land, now waste, lying in the burgh of Edinburgh, "in vico boario, lie Cowgait," on the south side of that street, near the said chapel, bounded on the south by the "arable lands called Wairin's croft now pertaining to the society of brewers or malsters," and otherwise by the properties of the late James Lamb, now waste, John Adamson, younger, and the heirs of the late John Nicolson, candlemaker, as described: To be held of the king for burgage service, and of the said James Mowat, chaplain, for a reddendo of £6, 16s. 8d. yearly. Dated at Edinburgh and Aberdeen, 1st, 15th, and 28th days of June 1604. Witnesses, . . .'

Again, a portion of the land laid out in the time of William Forbes for a cemetery had been turned to secular purposes and was the mealmarket, the site being still marked up to our own time by Old Mealmarket Close, for in connection with the Chepman property we are told in the deed of 1604¹ and one of the same year that is connected with it, that it lay on the south side of the Cowgate 'foiranent the Laichekirkzaird now being the commoun meilmercat place of the said brucht,' a phrase which seems to show that the site of the mealmarket was part of the land that was, at any rate prospectively, the cemetery. If Old Mealmarket Close² locates this 'commoun meilmercat place,' Chepman's property can also be fixed 'foiranent' or opposite to it on the other side of the street, where is now the Argyle Brewery. We are told, however, in both of these last documents that the Chepman property was at the time 'waste, ruinous, and uninhabited.' When it passed to Adam Cowpar of Gogar it is described as follows: 'the tenement of land bak and foir being now altogidder waist and rawinous, with housses, bigingis, zaird (No. 1),¹ well (No. 2, not located),² clois, thairof and thair pertinentis,' so that the value of it consisted in little more than the site.

We come now to the most important entries of all those contained in the ancient deeds now under consideration. In the first place, in 1605 a division was made of the Busschet-Mathesoun-Nicholson property to the west, and Adam Cowpar added half of it to the Chepman land he had obtained the year before. There were buildings on the site, 'quhairof thair is twa rwinous uninhabitt and the uther twa theikit with stray.' There was also an open yard (No. 3), 'and als the thak crocehous or tofall lyand at the northend of the said zaird,' on which a further word will presently be said. Next comes in 1620 an Instrument of Resignation and Sasine in favour of the Tailor Craft of the burgh of Edinburgh by which the original Chepman, now Cowpar, property passed into the hands of the Tailors' Incorporation, while a similar deed of the same year puts the Incorporation in possession also of the Mathesoun land to the west, bought fifteen years before by Adam Cowpar, in connection with which transfer there are certain topographical indications that are worth notice. We learn that the Chepman property consisted in 'lands and yard,' and that the Mathesoun land had also a yard, at the north end of which stood a 'thak-croce-hous' or 'Tofall.' This building did not, however, abut on the Cowgate, for it is also described as being on the south side of other tenements that were bounded on the east by the 'trans' or passage between, and serving the convenience of, the Chepman and Mathesoun properties. These last tenements (No. 4) we may presume faced the Cowgate, and they seem to have been separated from the 'croce-hous' by a narrow strip of waste land. The whole site, accordingly, that in 1620 became the property of the Tailors, embraced two courts or yards and various buildings, many, perhaps most, of which were in a ruinous state.

This condition of affairs makes natural the next important event relating to the property, the immediate erection, so that it was completed by 1621,¹ of the existing Tailors' Hall (No. 5) on the south side of the present open court, which we may take to correspond to the original 'yard' of the charters (No. 1). There can be no real question that this Hall and court occupy part of the site of the old Chepman property, and it is a plausible suggestion that the present buildings between the court and the Cowgate (No. 6), which are quite of seventeenth-century character,² were erected about the same time. These buildings are, however, extended westward along the Cowgate beyond the limits of the court and the Hall, and this extended part has at the back of it its own courtyard (No. 3). This we may assume to be Mathesoun property that the Tailors also had acquired. This Mathesoun property consisted of two tenements, and only half of it passed in 1605 to Adam Cowpar and from him to the Tailors. We do not know whether the division ran east and west or north and south, but the latter is more probable, for evidently the Cowpar moiety abutted on the Cowgate—see above (No. 4)—and there is a presumption that it extended backwards as far as the adjoining Chepman property had extended. How far this was may be inferred from an Act or Warrant of 1744 by the Dean of Guild Court permitting the Tailors to implement an agreement come to with the representative of Scott of Bavelaw¹ by opening a passage from 'Scott's Close in the Cowgate in order to be a passage leading to the Incorporation's Garden' (No. 7), 'and they, being resolved to open the said passage and put a door in their garden dyke at that place where the house of conveniency stood (No. 8), and to remove their said lillehouse² to the north-east corner of their Garden, accordingly crave and obtain a Warrant dated Feb. 1, 1744.' It may be interesting to know that Scott's Close is mentioned by Sir Walter in Redgauntlet, in the fourth letter of Darsie Latimer, where he contrasts the firm pavement of the Close with the shifting sands of the Solway. In a Minute Book with entries from 1747 to 1761 there is a mention in 1753 of 'their Hall Garden and back entry from Scott's Close to the said Hall,' and in 1754 a new key is obtained for the back door of the Garden. The situation of this Garden was undoubtedly at the back or southern side of the Hall, where is now an open courtyard (No. 7), so that the property extended a good way to the south.

In the Minute and Cash Books of the Incorporation, so far as these have been preserved, there are various mentions of buildings on the property, and it will probably be conducive to clearness if these are put together in this place without any reference to existing structures. In Part II. of this paper dealing with the latter, there will be an opportunity for offering suggestions as to the identity of some of these with structures mentioned in the documents.

The original deeds give little information of how the Tailors dealt with their new possessions during the rest of the seventeenth and early part of the eighteenth centuries, and the Minute and Cash Books furnish no entries earlier than the middle of the eighteenth century. The most instructive of the entries in these books is a specification dated 1755 in connection with a policy of insurance negotiated with the Sun Fire Insurance Office in London. We have here an enumeration of the buildings on the site with the amount of insurance on each, from which their relative importance can be inferred. The following is a verbatim copy: ' . . . their Tenements in the form of a Square on the South side of the Cougate opposite to the Meal Mercat Edinr, Stone and Slated, viz., a fforeland fronting the Cougate' (No. 6) ' Consisting of four Stories and Garrets occupied by Thomas Trotter Breuer & oysr not Exceeding Eight hundred pounds Sterling. A Tenement on the East Side of the Court' (No. 9) ' but Separate from the aforesaid not Exceeding Two hundred pounds money forsd. A Tenement Adjoining the South Gavel of the last mentioned which is Us'd for Conveening the Incorporation in the third Storie' (No. 5). ' The two Stories below are us'd as Malt Lofts occupied by Thomas Trotter aforesaid not Exceeding four hundred pounds. A Tenement adjoining the West Gavel of the last mentioned Used for Malt Barn or Granaries not Exceeding fourty pounds' (No. 11). ' Breu-house & Malt Kiln adjoining on the West Side of the Court Separate from the aforesaid Buildings not Exceeding sixty pounds all Stone and Slated . . .' (No. 10).

The impression conveyed by this entry, to which others with the same significance will be added, would lead us to the idea that the Tailors were aspiring to become brewers, and were more concerned to reinforce the ' innards' of the lieges with beer than to keep them warm and seemly by clothing. Brewing was an early industry in the district, and has remained the leading occupation along the whole line of the Cowgate and its continuation, the old south back of the Canongate, now Holyrood Road. The natural water supply is supposed to account in large measure for this, and in this connection we may note the mention of the well (No. 2) in the deed recording the sale to Cowpar in 1605, as also three references in the Minute Books, to 'their draw-well' in 1750, 'the pump to the brewery' in 1753, and 'use of the pump well' in 1799.

The early interest of the Tailors in the brewing industry may have arisen in this way. In 1597-8 there was formed 'The Fellowship and Society of Ale and Beer Brewers of the Burgh of Edinburgh.' They had their premises at the Society (so called from them) not many yards distant from the Tailors' Garden (No. 7). This Fellowship or Society was incorporated by Charter, and is believed to have been the first commercial incorporation in Scotland. It continued to exist for about twenty-one years, till it was dissolved in 1618.¹ For some years before there had been friction in the affairs of the Fellowship, and the Tailors had evidently set about to capture the wandering members of that body.

The Tailors naturally needed little more for their own purposes than their Hall of meeting and its immediate adjuncts, and would at once let the tenements which they became possessed of or rebuilt along the Cowgate and to the east and west of the yard or court (No. 1). Some of these, like their own Hall, were used for brewing purposes when they let them, for in 1749 the Tailors let 'their brewery' to Thomas Trotter, brewer, who in the insurance specification of 1755 is in possession of the Cowgate frontage, while the west side of the court is devoted also to the brewing interest. The east side was at the first similarly disposed, but in 1771 some one offered to 'take the north wing of the Lodging providing the Brewhouse was converted into a Coach-house and Stables,' and in 1799 there was grant of 'a Tack of the Lodging on the East side of their Close with the two stables and Coach-house on the West side thereof,' the entries evidently referring to the same subjects. In 1800 'Mr. Campbell, Brewer in the Cowgate,' offered to purchase 'the Corporation's back property,' and the next year the transfer was effected, and 'Campbell's Brewery,' or 'The Argyle Brewery,' was established on the site which it now completely occupies and utilises.

[This is a suitable place in which to express our deep indebtedness to the proprietors of this large establishment, and especially to the Manager, for the extremely liberal fashion in which they have allowed us to have access to all parts of their premises, and the interest they have evinced in our investigations.]

Brewing was, however, not the only industry carried on within our period on the site. In 1757 'Alexander Kincaid, Bookseller in Edinr,' offers to purchase an important part of the property, and is ultimately accepted as a tenant. Bailie (afterwards Provost) Kincaid was a prominent citizen of his time, and his name remains attached to 'Kincaid's Close' a little to the east of the Incorporation's property. A little later an entry in the Cash Book shows that Kincaid was paying rent for a 'printing house,' and this great Edinburgh craft was in this way attracted hither, so that when in 1800 Campbell made his offer for the property, we are told that this had been 'lately advertised as the possession of His Majesty's late Printers for Scotland,' who had left behind them some printing presses that caused embarrassment. It must be remembered also that Walter Chepman, the proprietor in the sixteenth century of the site, was the first Edinburgh printer. Furthermore, in 1822 a substantial part of the tenement was occupied as a schoolroom, for in January of that year a committee was appointed 'to examine whether it would be proper to change the Hall to the adjoining large room belonging to the Incorporation presently occupied as a schoolroom,' so that the Incorporation may claim that it encouraged the three great Edinburgh industries, beer-brewing, printing, and education. Nor was the lighter side of life neglected. The metropolitan city was bound to be a place of the arts and of social gaiety, and accordingly in 1774, 'upon the petition of John Armour, Secretary to a musical society, the Incorporation agree to let them have the use of the Hall for half a year at the rent of 20 shillings.' This is of interest in connection with the use of the Tailors' Hall in the earlier part of the eighteenth century for theatrical performances, which subject is dealt with in Part III.

In connection with these various lettings and proposals for sale, it is surprising to find the Hall itself treated just like a pawn in the game, without any marked difference between it and the other buildings on the property for which the Incorporation itself would have no special use. The inscription over the doorway (Fig. 11) is imposingly worded and suggests that the 'Tailzeours' would take pride in their corporate habitation, in the same way in which the neighbouring Incorporation of Hammermen showed a pious interest in the Magdalen Chapel and its fittings. The Tailors' Minute and Cash Books, however, give little sign of this. The Hammermen held the Magdalen Chapel till the year 1863, while, in 1801, as we have seen, the Argyle Brewery became possessed of the whole of the Tailors' property in the Cowgate, with the exception of No. 11 which the Incorporation reserved to themselves.

During their tenure of the Magdalen Chapel, successive generations of the Hammermen not only asserted the dignity of the place by erecting, in 1620, the imposing tower, a manifesto of corporate pride, as was shown in the previous paper,¹ but were constantly adding to it fittings in the shape of bells, stone carvings, painted armorial shields, inscriptions, screens, chairs, candelabra, a Bible with its standard, and the like, of which successive generations took proper care, so that the whole has descended to our time as a most remarkable relic of antiquity. The Tailors' Hall has on the other hand, in spite of its exterior inscriptions, come down to us as a mere shell, with comparatively modern internal divisions, so that it is very difficult to restore in thought its original appearance.

The Kincaid proposal just referred to was a proposal to buy outright the Tailors' Hall, and as a fact, though they would not sell, the Incorporation 'Resolve that Mr. Kincaid shall have a Tack of their said Hall and Garden . . . at thirty pounds sterling of yearly Rent,' but they add the words 'Except the Room on the West end thereof Which they reserve to themselves for a Meeting house' (No. 11). Another minute adds, 'Reserving the use of the Garden and office-house at the time of their Meetings during the currency of the said Tack.' On this west room (No. 11) something will be said in the sequel (postea, p. 151). That the Hall was not much valued at the time may be inferred from the fact that in 1749, when the Tailors' brewery was let to Thomas Trotter (antea, p. 137), they allowed him to lodge '200 Bolls of Bear' in their Hall. It is called at the same time 'their convening house,' and we so find it in minutes, e.g. in 1751 'the Incorporation of the Taylors of Edinb. Being Duely Calld & convend in their Hall and convening house,' and also 'in their convening house or Hall in the Cowgate of Edinr.' An entry in the Cash Book in 1756 is worth notice, 'To a Fire to the Hall on Belton Day.' This celebration of the primeval midsummer festival by the godly Edinburgh Tailors of the middle of the eighteenth century is of some interest. When Kincaid in 1757 rented the Hall it was in need of repairs, and the Incorporation allowed him £300 'for repairing and meliorating the Taylors Hale,' to which he added from his own pocket £75. To Nicol Graham, who had to take down the roof of the Hall, there was paid £60, and Peter Jamieson, mason, received £20. 'New Windows with Yoke Glass'¹ were added to 'the Stair of the hall,' and 'flooring, Plastering, Roofing' are recorded, all in 1757, while in the next year Nicol Graham's 'Relict' received £175, 10s. Later on, in 1770 Kincaid obtained permission 'for striking out windows in the south wall of the Hall.' The letting of the Hall in 1774 for musical purposes has already been noticed, but ten years later there is evidence that some members of the Incorporation were not satisfied with the furnishing forth of the Hall, which no doubt compared unfavourably with the Magdalen Chapel. On 10th September 1784 'the Deacon moved that in former times sundry donations, etc., were made the Corporation, And the names of the Donors were affixed on the Walls of the Society's Hall—that the place of Meeting at present required something to be done with it, and suggested a Committee of the whole house to examine into the matter, and cause the whole to be cleared up and placed in the present Hall.' Nothing apparently came of this motion. In 1822, however, some internal embellishments of the kind were actually carried out, for on 19th November of that year 'the Incorporation remitted to the new Hall Committee to order and direct the furnishings and interior decorations of the Hall according to their best judgement.' A portrait of His Majesty and another of a benefactor of the Incorporation were hung up in the Hall, and in 1824 there is minuted an order that certain donations 'be recorded on the walls of the Hall to the honor of the donors,' while at the same meeting 'the Incorporation ordered the Treasurer to get Brass Candlesticks for the Hall, and to cause to be put up the readings on the walls, and to paint the Hall.'

At this same epoch, however, there was a shortage in the funds available for improvements in the Hall, for whereas a warrant had been obtained in the Dean of Guild Court for structural alterations to cost £250, the Incorporation on 11th July 1822 resolved 'that they leave the outer or main door as at present without alteration and curtail the internal alterations proposed so as to reduce cost to £150.' One rather important work was, however, in September of this year actually set on foot, and this was the lowering of the floor of the 'new Hall,' as it is called in the minute, from thirteen to fourteen inches.¹ A few days later it was reported that the old flooring of the Hall was not good enough to lay down again, and it was decided 'to lay the floor of the Hall with new wood, and to employ the wood of the old floor in the improvements in the sunk flat.' The last entry concerning the Hall in the extant books is a curious one of 1825, in which year 'the Clerk . . . directed to inquire whether the proprietor or tenant of the area in front of the windows of the Hall was entitled to erect deals opposite the windows of the Hall, as he was doing,' and it seems to have been decided that the 'proprietor of the area on the north of the Hall was entitled to build on that area, the height of the bottom of the old windows of the Hall.'

It is to be noted that the Hall was only a part, and financially not the most important part, of the Cowgate property. The specification of insurance in 1755 quoted on a previous page (antea, p. 136) shows this, and in 1825 similar rates are quoted, when 'the Incorporation ordered insurances to be effected on the following properties belonging to the Incorporation, as follows, viz. Hall and house adjoining £350, furniture therein, £150; Cowgate subjects £1000 . . .' That 'Cowgate subjects' mean the present picturesque building facing that thoroughfare seems quite clear. In 1797 Mr. William Gowans, grocer in Cowgate, offers 'to take a tack of the Incorporation's two tenements of Land situate in Cowgate' at a yearly rent of £48 (Kincaid's rent in 1757 for the Hall and Garden was £30: see, antea, p. 140), while a later entry of 1797 calls the property 'the two front tenements.' In 1815 this Cowgate property was inspected, and was found 'not in that full state of repair that could be wished.' It was let, however, in the next year at the handsome rental of £95 per annum. An entry of 1802 goes into some detail about an arrangement to build up with stone and lime three doors which formerly entered from the houses in the ground floor of the tenement into the court. As a compromise they were converted into three windows with iron stanchions. Exactly where these were we cannot tell.

PART II.—THE BUILDINGS

The Tailors' Hall and the buildings facing the Cowgate on the south side of the street, all situated on lands of which, in the preceding pages, the history has been traced, have hitherto been dealt with in a very perfunctory and quite misleading manner.

The buildings are arranged in courtyard fashion, the courtyard measuring about 48 feet from east to west by 52 feet from north to south, the buildings on the latter sides being of early seventeenth-century date and very characteristic examples of city architecture of that time. Those on the east and west sides are relatively modern structures. Entering from the Cowgate through the wide pend or cart entrance under the front land, to be hereafter described, the visitor finds himself in the courtyard opposite the Hall, a plain but striking building of originally three storeys in height, the present fourth storey being an addition of the eighteenth century. The projecting tower at the east end contains the wide wheel stair, and so converts the simple oblong building into the L plan so characteristic of the seventeenth century. At the west end of the Hall, and extending to Scott's Close, there are buildings of a kiln, a private room, etc., which have no connection with the Hall as such till a later period. Here we may explain that the Cowgate lies in a narrow valley about 60 or 70 feet below the level of the High Street on the north side, and with such a steep rise on the south side as would have been impracticable for the purpose of the Tailors' buildings, being a gradient of about 1 in 6 or 7, so they cut into the hill and made a suitable slope for buildings and courtyard; in this way light could only be obtained from the courtyard, except in the upper part of the hall where it rose above the sloping ground.

The building has been very freely dealt with during its later history, and with no regard to what one may suppose to have been the original intention. The entrance to the Hall has been changed and its old doorway built up, and the Hall floor has been raised about 3 feet to the level of the window-sills. A new storey has been added, and the main stair has been continued upwards to serve the same. Timber beams beneath the joists in the centre of each ceiling supported by timber posts all strongly trussed, as seen in the photographs (Figs. 4 and 5), have been added. All this has been done for supporting heavy loads of grain, malt, and the heavy business of a manufactory. The first floor (see Fig. 5) is occupied with the stone borings brought up by the drills, about $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches in diameter, when boring for water, and, as already said, there is hardly any suggestion about the place of any corporate use or purpose, such as we know from references given in Part I. existed to a certain limited extent.

The ground floor is at present an open space, measuring about 53 feet 6 inches long by 23 feet wide, with one or two separate compartments divided by temporary timber screens, with an enclosure for a pumping engine over a well at the place shown on plan. A tunnel beneath the back garden and in connection with this floor extends southwards for a distance of 77 feet 4 inches by a width of 29 feet 8 inches, and there is a considerable enlargement of the floor space at the back on the east side; the whole of this is well lighted from above, and is of modern cast-iron construction.

The Hall on the first floor did not, as might have been expected from its spacious and easy construction, enter from the wheel stair, but by a stair leading up from the courtyard in front of the door. There were several contemporary mansion-houses in the locality which had their principal entrance in this manner, and we reproduce our sketch, made in 1869 of such a one, called Broadstairs House, which was taken down about thirty years ago (Fig. 8). It is, of course, quite probable that the stair for the Hall might have been of a more imposing design than was considered suitable for a private house. The doorway is a simple dignified design, having a broad back-fillet round the opening with a sharply relieved bead on the inner edge, with the upward turned quirk in the centre of the lintel; this latter feature will be also seen in the sketch of Broadstairs House. The doorway is differentiated from the windows by being at a lower level and by having its lintel shouldered at each end.

The second floor over the Hall was reached by the wheel stair, a view of which, given in Fig. 9, shows the picturesque effects of perspective and light and shade that these old features often present. The fine old oak door, iron-studded, will be seen on the right hand of the picture. It is rather curious that it should be over the doorway to this secondary hall that we find the following inscription, which must be regarded in the light of events as a somewhat inflated one. Inscriptions are generally placed over the principal doorway, and the abnormal position of this one is accentuated by the appearance of a paraphrase of it on the dormer high up on the wall-head over this door (see Fig. 10). The inscription is as follows (see Fig. 11):—

The doorway itself is a very fine example of its period, and one of the best remaining in Edinburgh. It is beautifully moulded along its jambs and lintel, the latter being a large stone 6 feet long by about 1 foot 9 inches high. The raised lettering is in four lines, with the date 1621 skilfully brought in as shown on the photograph; the whole thing is very perfect in its style and quite charming. While it may be noted that rhyming dedications are not very common, the ligatures and the irregularly placed points of division should be noticed. This floor is just a repetition of the one below, except that it has windows in the south wall as shown in Fig. 4. From this landing a projecting stair turret at the ingoing angle of the L led up to a cape-house room over the stair. The built-up door to the stair may still be seen, although the turret has been removed when cape-house and upper flat came to be built. These cape-houses were generally a storey higher than the main part of the building, and so obtained that tower-like effect so dear to the builders of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. This was effectively done here by having a good-sized dormer window with a corresponding moulded pediment, which was richly adorned with fleur-de-lis ornaments, two at the base and one at the apex, with intermediate S-shaped scrolls on either side. These, it will be observed, are placed reverse-wise, quite an independent touch. This pediment still exists, as shown in Fig. 12, while Fig. 10 shows it in a nearer view. It is built in three courses of large stones with these respective ornaments on the several stones, the paraphrased inscription just referred to being on the lower stone thus—

IN THE GOOD TOVN OF EDINBURGH.

The other appears to have been ornamented.

In the year 1638 men's minds were taken up with the National Covenant, the particulars regarding the adoption of which will be found in Part III.

This was an event of great moment in Scotland, and at the same time it throws considerable light on the history of the Hall. We see the actors in this incident of the Covenant in great numbers moving easily about from the Hall in the then upper floor to the summer-house in the back yard: and when we consider the travelling conditions of the time, the absence of accommodation for travellers, the great crowd of visitors, and the probable poverty of many, we can only conclude that the Tailors' Hall on this occasion served also the purpose of an inn. All the circumstances point to the fact that Covenanters' meetings took place in the second or upper floor of the Tailors' Hall buildings. Parties would come in from the Greyfriars at the upper end of the Garden and enter, down a few steps, to the upper floor. The original entrance from the Garden to the upper hall will be seen on Fig. 13, built up and half concealed by beer-barrels, a very significant feature of the place. The doorway was distinguished from the walling by a broad polished and moulded back fillet having a neat cornice above—all now much mutilated. There was another access from the Garden, which by an open stair at the west end of the Hall led down to the lower hall, and to the passage leading to Scott's Close. To suppose that the entrance was by the Cowgate and through the courtyard would be to ignore the situation and the circumstances of the locality. It is quite interesting to remember that one hundred and seventeen years after this meeting of Covenanters the hall of this upper floor was the convening room of the Tailors, and that the two storeys below were used as malt lofts.

In 1648 a matter of less importance than the foregoing, but still one of national concern, came to be discussed in the Tailors' Hall. The gentry were aggrieved against the great nobles for having obtained power from Parliament to reduce the former to be their vassals instead of being vassals to the Crown. Sir John Scot of Scotstarvit was included among the sufferers. He was not the man to submit to this quietly, and he tells us 'I gott warrand from 14 shyres to complane to the part in there names and to urge the act to be made in the gentries favours and they commissionat some principall barrons to second me in that bussines being 80 persons in all at a meeting in the tailzeours hall qhere sir Joⁿ was president.'¹ Some considerable time before this Sir John met accidentally in Edinburgh with some of his aggrieved friends, 'quho behoved to meete privatlie in the Cowgate for feare to be apprehended by the counsellors and noblemen, and there presently he penned the petition of the gentry anent ther teyndns possest be noblemen and titulars of kirk Lands.'² So we may presume that there had been other meetings in the Hall besides the above one.

At the west end of the Hall there is a projecting building which extends to Scott's Close occupying No. 11. It is of a complicated plan and has been knocked about a good deal. The ground floor is old, as is the upper floor; the intermediate building seems to be of last century. The ground floor is an arched apartment and measures inside 20 feet by 13 feet by about 6 feet high. Over this, and entering from the first floor of the Hall and down five steps from the same, this space is occupied by a kiln with a passage round it, and having an ordinary fireplace, which seems to indicate that this was a room before the introduction of the kiln. Some 5 feet up from kiln floor there is a wide passage which leads out to Scott's Close. This passage is on the original level of the sloping ground, and is now about 3 feet 6 inches above Scott's Close level. Along one side of this passage there is an open gutter with an outlet to the Close, which seems (outlet and gutter) to be of old construction, but at present serves no purpose. On the other side of this passage and at a higher level by about one foot, also adjusted to the rising ground, there is another room which was about 23 feet long by 20 feet wide, which has an entrance also on the east side adjoining the Hall. From this passage a stair of 18 steps leads up to the back garden.

This room has been shut up and out of use for many years, doors locked and key lost. It was reserved to themselves by the Incorporation for a meeting house during Kincaid's lease, as also the garden, etc. Towards the end of the eighteenth century there were regrets amongst some of the members that the use to which the Hall had been put did not quite correspond to the ideas of the founders of the Incorporation, and that they had nothing to show regarding their corporate civic life but bare walls and pious inscriptions, with no reference to reality, but it was not till near the end of the first quarter of the nineteenth century that anything was done to remedy these omissions, when, on the 19th November 1822, a portrait of His Majesty King George IV. was hung on the wall of this room. Three months before this His Majesty landed at Leith on his memorable visit to Scotland. One wonders if the portrait was painted while he was in Edinburgh, who was the artist, and where it is now? Where are the two brass candlesticks and other things got for the Hall about the same time? Is it possible that all these still exist, presided over by the king for one hundred years?

The variety of uses to which these buildings were put was to be increased in 1757, when Alexander Kincaid became tenant of the upper floor as a printing room for the rent of £30 sterling per annum. This evidently refers to the upper floor only. The place was in need of repairs, and, as we have seen, considerable sums of money were raised for these, the Tailors contributing £300. The top storey was in all likelihood erected at this time, as there is a payment to a joiner for taking down the old roof as the first step to be taken for effecting this purpose. The new work, however useful it may be, has not added to the dignity or interest of the place. Thirteen years later, in 1770, liberty was given to Kincaid to strike out windows in the back wall. These are necessarily confined to the upper part of the wall, the sills being a few inches above the level of the surface of the back garden.

The picturesque building facing the Cowgate, with the wide centre pend leading to the courtyard (No. 1) and having a frontage of about 65 feet 6 inches, and the tenement to the west extending to Scott's Close and having a frontage of about 25 feet 3 inches, are undoubtedly the finest examples of old Scottish street architecture remaining in Edinburgh, and we question if there is anything better in any other town. They are contemporary, the larger dated 1644 and the other 1643. They are about 60 feet high, but being in a very narrow street they are not very well seen, and to make this defect worse, somewhere about thirty years ago a building towering 10 or 20 feet higher was allowed to be built on the opposite side, surely violating all modern sanitary requirements. It made a darkened dismal street, and to rectify this it was recently proposed to take down the fine old Tailors' Hall buildings, and so let in light to the street which had been darkened by these modern structures. Fig. 14 gives the whole elevation, while the photographs, Figs. 15, 16, 17, exhibit its upper parts. The elevation is very arresting, and owes its fine effect to its diversified skyline and the happy grouping of all its parts in one straight surface. There is at each end of the main building a common stair with entrance door, with small-sized windows for lighting the stair. These windows are not placed over the doors but a little to one side. Over this there is a lofty crow-stepped dormer with a centre window of good size: this is the arrangement at each end. In the centre of the front there is an arched wide entrance, with windows in the upper storeys, and on the first floor, between the windows, an ornamental panel (see photograph, Fig. 18). Above there is a wide lofty dormer, finished by a crow-stepped gable with double window in apex. On each side of this gable, and close to it, there is a substantial lofty chimney, these features constituting the centre of the design. On the two remaining sections on each side of the centre, and extending to the already described end-compartments, there is a wide double dormer window of one storey, the gables of which are plain, not crow-stepped, but with thistle termination finials. There are dormer windows of wood above these on the roof. It will probably be found that in the best work throughout Scotland small dormers are seldom finished with crow-steps. The street floor contains two shops, one on each side of the wide entrance. The front of each has two windows with a door between. The east shop has these openings very neatly moulded with a small wood frame rounded at the corners. The other had the openings splayed and is at present in a very forlorn state. Over the shops there is a timber cornice, and beneath the second and third floor windows a moulded stone string-course breaking at some of the windows. While the striking skyline arrests the least observant, one notes also the simple arrangement of the windows in pairs near each other, and not always of the same width, with the wide expanse of masonry between the groups. When these things are perceived, one sees how very carefully the whole has been designed.

We may here take a rapid look at the plan of the tenement. It is a block measuring about 66 feet long by about 25 feet wide, and with two back wings, shown in Fig. 19, separated by a space open to the sky 10 feet wide, the whole width from back to front being 43 feet. This main block with wings is very reminiscent of Scottish house-planning for long periods before and since. On each flat there are two houses of three and four rooms each. It is probable that the houses on the fourth floor included the attics in their accommodation. The narrow-fronted tenement to the west has a wheel stair and contains some three rooms on each flat, and was built at the same time as the one just described, is of the same height, as is also the shop front. The windows are arranged three to each floor, and the upper dormers correspond fairly well with those alongside except they are not crow-stepped. One of the rooms has a rather interesting plaster ceiling, very much worn by countless washings during the centuries (Fig. 20). In the centre there appears something like the bust of a woman with a feathered-looking headpiece. Another room, an attic (Fig. 21), is exceedingly quaint by its irregular shape, its sloping roof and upright walls, and its lighting. These houses have been closed for many years, and in their early days they were probably occupied by very superior tenants, but latterly this was quite reversed, the tenants being of a very rough class, insomuch that interiors are smashed and ruined, and only here and there are any traces left of interior finishings such as the above ceiling. Some of the rooms are very suggestive of snug comfort, where a happy contented life might have been led.

On the stair door lintel there is inscribed :—

R.H. O MAGNIFIE THE LORD WITH ME I.H.
AND LET US EXALT HIS NAME TOGETHER
ANNO DOMINI 1643.

Above the inscription is a carved panel representing two porters carrying a cask on a pole supported on their shoulders.

A similar scene is sculptured, along with a ship and other things, on a stone in Tolbooth Wynd, Leith, dated 1678.¹

The sanitary arrangements of these houses may not appear to have been of a very satisfactory kind, tested by the standards of this century, but this science like all others is a progressive one, and it was not till the scourges of the early part of last century swept over the country that matters began to improve. But we have seen (see antea, p. 135), in regard to these buildings, that certain sanitary provisions were made in providing houses of conveniency in the gardens behind, and the water supply was ample. As the interior construction requires to be renewed, it would be easy to supply modern sanitary arrangements and remove the modern building which blocks the back windows at the east end. The mason work is of a first-class kind, and the quality of the design of the elevations warrants us in reiterating our statement that this is the finest example of street architecture of the old Scottish style remaining in Scotland.

We have already seen some of the diverse purposes to which the Tailors' Hall was put from its first beginning, and have referred to these frequently, and it will be seen from Part III., by Mr. Forbes Gray, that this diversity of purpose was the constant and ever-abiding feature of the place, to an extent unparalleled by any old building in Edinburgh.

With the appearance of the theatrical performances, in connection with which we read of the pit and gallery for the audience and the stage with its moving machinery for the actors, it becomes evident that the floors must have been adjustable to suit requirements. We have already noted that the level of the first floor entering from the fore stair was at a lower level by about three feet than it is at present. This additional height, with the power of adjusting the floor above, would provide space for the gallery, so that the Tailors'

PART III.—TWO CHAPTERS FROM ITS HISTORY

The Tailors' Hall is closely associated with one of the most dramatic incidents in the ecclesiastical history of Scotland—the signing of the National Covenant. That event occurred on 28th February 1638; but on the previous day important preliminary steps were taken, and it is with these that the Tailors' Hall is connected.

Briefly, the position stood thus: The Presbyterian leaders were convinced that if Episcopacy was to be resisted effectually, the nation must be united against the ecclesiastical policy of the Crown. This, they thought, could best be realised by renewing the 'Second Covenant'—a negative Confession of Faith drawn up in 1581, and signed by James VI. and many nobles and ministers. The choice of this Confession, rather than that of Knox and the first Reformers, has been described as 'a dexterous stroke of policy.'¹ The Confession of 1581, which merely condemned Romish doctrine, served two purposes. It virtually compelled the acquiescence of the King, and it obtained the sanction of many ministers who would have objected to subscribe the Confession of Knox.

On 23rd February it was decided by 'a conjunct motione from the nobilitie, gentry, burgesses, and ministers' to modernise the King's Confession of 1581 by making 'such additions as the corruptions of this tyme necessarlie requyred to be joyned, and such Acts of Parliament as was against Poperie and in favours of the true religione.' ¹ It was further resolved solemnly to protest against the Laudian innovations as alien to the Scottish mode of worship, and to take an oath of mutual defence in support of the Crown and of the Presbyterian religion. Such were the component parts of the National Covenant.

The preparation of this historic document was entrusted to Sir Archibald Johnston of Wariston and Alexander Henderson, both leaders of what is known as the Second Reformation. The draft was completed on 27th February, when it was read and criticised at a meeting of the nobles in John Galloway's house in Niddry's Wynd. Later in the day, the Earls of Rothes and Loudoun attended a conference of the ministers in the Tailors' Hall for the purpose of showing them the ' draught, and move their consent thereto.' ² Rothes and Loudoun were accompanied by Henderson and Johnston of Wariston, the authors of the draft, John Adamson, Principal of the College of Edinburgh, and others. Previous to the meeting of the ministers, a private conference was held with the Commissioners of Presbyteries in ' the summer-house in the yaird ' of the Tailors' Hall. Here the draft was read. Objections were made to certain clauses, and eventually it was agreed to ' mend that passage which binds the judgement, in so farr as concernes the Articles of Pearth.' At the close a vote was taken, when it was found that ' all the Commissioners were of one judgement.' ³

The leaders of the Supplicants now entered the Tailors' Hall, where were assembled ' betuixt tuo or three hunder ' ministers. Principal Adamson was chosen Moderator. The ministers were in a critical mood, being more conscious than the laymen of difficulties regarding the National Covenant. That much depended on the conference, is apparent from an entry in Johnston of Wariston's Diary, 1632-1639: 'Afternoon with great fears we went to the ministrie' (p. 321). Be that as it may, the harmonious meeting with the Commissioners in 'the summer-house in the yaird' of the Tailors' Hall inspired most of the leaders with hope.

The amended draft was read, and the ministers were informed that the Commissioners of Presbyteries had offered objections, though all had been removed 'partlie by cleer and full answers, and partlie by reasoning sumthing.'¹ There was therefore less reason for division among them. Nevertheless the ministers were desired 'to tell their minds befor they voted.' Rothés conveys the impression that there was unanimity. The ministers, he says, 'assented all with verrie great heartines, blessing the instruments of so good a work.'² This, however, is too favourable a view, as Rothés' own account shows. Several of the ministers did 'tell their minds.' Mr. Coline Adame, minister of Anstruther, 'craved to be sattisfied in some points,' and he was joined by Mr. Harie Fithie and a third minister (unnamed). The chief objection of Mr. Fithie and his nameless co-Presbyter was that having 'sworne to the Five Articles' (of Perth), they could not swear the contrary without being guilty of perjury. Ultimately the scruples of Mr. Adame and the unnamed minister were allayed. Mr. Harie Fithie's objections were more difficult to overcome. Rothés pleaded with him, and 'he took to advyse till the next day.' There was still another dissentient—Mr. John Home, minister of Eccles. He was at a loss to understand how the oath could be 'exacted of them.' Rothés replied that none could be compelled to take the oath, but it was expected that all would 'make their oath to God Almighty.'³ With this explanation Home 'rested satisfied.'

When all objections had been dealt with, the Moderator thanked 'the Lords and these that wer with him' for 'takeing the paines to come and communicate things with them,' adding that they had been 'singular instruments, both now and befor, in so honest a cause.' Rothes modestly replied. 'They deserved no praise,' for the keeping of so 'great a multitude in ane unanimous concord (notwithstanding of the craftie machinationes of these who laboured a divisione) was God's work.' He desired their prayers that 'respect of religione . . . might always remaine with the Supplicants,' and that 'God might make his owne work prosper in their hands, who aimed at the glorie of God, the peace of the Kirk, and honour of the King.'¹

Prayer having been offered by the Moderator, this memorable conference of Covenanting ministers in the Tailors' Hall was brought to a close. There was much rejoicing over the harmony that had prevailed. 'My heart did leape within for joie,' writes Johnston of Wariston.² Rothes was also elated. 'My Lord Rothes,' writes Robert Baillie to a correspondent, 'finding our great harmony, departed with the profession of great joy; for this union was the great pillar of the cause.'³ Next day (28th February) the draft of the National Covenant, which had been approved in the Tailors' Hall, was signed by nobles, barons, ministers, and commissioners of burghs in Greyfriars' Church.

On 1st March, Rothes, Lindsay, Loudoun, and others went again to the Tailors' Hall to reason with those ministers who had doubts, but had been prevented from attending the conference two days before. After those who had been formerly 'resolved' (i.e. satisfied) had begun to subscribe, the noblemen, we are told, 'resolved' the doubts of the late comers in the 'yaird,' with the result that by night 'towards thrie hundred ministers' had subscribed.⁴ It would therefore appear that the National Covenant was not only approved in the Tailors' Hall, but actually signed there by several ministers.

The Covenanting episode of 1638 did not close the ecclesiastical history of the Tailors' Hall. After the Revolution, recusant ministers were in the habit of preaching within its walls, as the following extract from the City Records, dated 7th April 1691, shows :—

‘The Council receives up the keys of the Magdalen Chapel and Taylors’ Hall which had been set for public worship to the Ministers who were deprived of their charges for refusing to pray for King William and Queen Mary, and such Ministers are discharged from preaching in churches or elsewhere until they present themselves before the Lords of the Privy Council and take, swear, and subscribe the oath of alleadgance and engadge under thair hands to pray for King William and Queen Mary as King and Queen of this realme, and not to owen the late King James the Seventh for thair King.’

During the Cromwellian régime the Tailors’ Hall was the court-house of the Scottish Commissioners appointed by the Lord Protector for the administration of the forfeited estates of the Royalists. In the Diary of John Nicoll, which covers the period 1650-1667, there is an entry to this effect :—

‘This 16 day of Junij (1656), being Monday, ane Proclamatioun emittit in favouris of creditores to forfalt persones, that these creditouris, quho, as yit, haif not gevin in thair clames, sould yit be hard by the trustees, and thair clames resavit be thame being impowdered to that effect, and ordanit that court to be haldin weeklie in the Tailzeouris Hall in Edinburgh’ (p. 180).

Early in the eighteenth century the Tailors’ Hall began a new chapter of its history—a chapter entirely different from the old. In the previous century, as has been shown, high-souled Covenanters had met within its walls and shaped anew the religious destinies of Scotland ; but from 1733 till some years after the opening of the Canongate Theatre in 1747, it was a playhouse where itinerant companies gave performances of mutilated versions of Shakespeare’s plays and of dramatic pieces less reputable. At the beginning of the eighteenth century the theatre, so far as Edinburgh was concerned, was non-existent. Occasionally strolling players came from England, but their performances were banned by the Kirk and interdicted by the magistrates. Such was the fate that overtook Allan Ramsay's playhouse in Carrubber's Close which, opened in 1736, was closed in June 1737. The ex-wigmaker had recourse to law, but received only the puzzling and comfortless verdict that 'though he had been damaged, he had not been injured.'

The proscription of the drama was such that when, in 1739, a Bill was promoted in Parliament to enable His Majesty to license a theatre in Edinburgh, the measure could not be proceeded with because of the determined opposition of the Town Council, the Dean of Guild Court, and the Principal and Senatus of the College. Nevertheless 'the clergy continued to rail against theatrical entertainments' by which 'a spirit of party was excited.'¹

But if the drama was moribund, it was not extinct. Plays were performed occasionally at the Tailors' Hall, though, in order to evade the penalty of the law, they were acted 'gratis' after a concert. Thespis assuredly was not honoured by these productions. Crude and jejune, they showed the histrionic art at its lowest, while their moral tone was that of the Restoration drama. The adaptations of Shakespeare by Dryden and D'Avenant, and the second-rate comedies of Georgian playwrights like Gay, Cibber, and Henry Carey, interspersed now and then with pieces of a higher quality, e.g. Addison's Cato, Steele's comedy The Tender Husband, or Allan Ramsay's pastoral The Gentle Shepherd—such was the kind of drama that brought a crowded audience to the Tailors' Hall. The prices of admission were 2s. 6d. for the pit and boxes, and 1s. 6d. for the gallery, the average drawings being from £40 to £45 a night. The performances were advertised, and from the files of the Caledonian Mercury it is possible to learn nearly all that there is to learn of the theatrical history of the Tailors' Hall.

On 6th June 1733 the Edinburgh Company of Players began a series of performances with the Beggar's Opera,¹ the proceeds of which were given to the Edinburgh Infirmary 'without the least drawback.' Then followed Othello, Hamlet, Henry IV., and the Humours of Falstaff, the last a wretched réchauffé. The repertoire also included 'another of Shakespeare's excellent plays, King Lear and his Three Daughters.' During the summer months the Edinburgh Company made a tour in the north, but on 5th November they began the winter season at the Tailors' Hall with 'the favourite play of Tamerlane.'² On 26th December the citizens had the opportunity of hearing for the first time The Tempest; or, The Inchaned Island,³ 'with all the musick, sinkings, risings, new scenes, and other decorations proper for the performance.' It was evidently the custom at the Tailors' Hall for unauthorised persons to go behind the scenes, but on this occasion it was announced that only 'those who manage the machinery' would be admitted there. The doors of the pit and gallery were to be opened after four o'clock in the afternoon, though the performance was not to begin till six. In emasculating The Tempest, D'Avenant had the assistance of Dryden. 'The effect produced,' says Dr. Samuel Johnson, 'by the conjunction of these two powerful minds,' was 'that to Shakespeare's monster,

² By Nicholas Rowe (1674-1718), the earliest of the Hanoverian Poets Laureate. The play was first produced in 1702, and on it Rowe staked his dramatic reputation. Its political feeling is shown by the fact that Tamerlane was William III., while the reprobate Bajazet represented Britain's enemy, Louis XIV. of France.

³ A mutilated version of Shakespeare's play by Sir William D'Avenant (1606-1668) and John Dryden (1631-1700). Both were Poets Laureate. D'Avenant succeeded Ben Jonson in the office. Dryden was the greatest man of letters of his time.

Caliban,' was added 'a sister-monster Sicorax; and a woman who, in the original play, had never seen a man is, in this, brought acquainted with a man that had never seen a woman.' Such was the play which was received with 'universal applause' at the Tailors' Hall by 'the fullest audience that has been for some considerable time. . . . Every part, and even what required machinery,' was 'performed in great order.'

By 'desire of several persons of distinction,' *The Miser*¹ was performed on 2nd January 1734, and, five days later, in response to the wishes of several ladies, the actors appeared in The Careless Husband,² which was supplemented by the entertaining ballad-opera, The Devil to Pay; or, The Wives Changed.³ For the benefit of one of the performers 'a play call'd Macbeth' and the opera Flora; or, Hob in the Well were staged on 1st February. The former was Shakespeare's drama converted into an opera by D'Avenant with, says an authority, 'machines for the witches, with dancing, and with all that singing which still continues to disgrace this admirable tragedy.'

The Edinburgh Company seems to have remained at the Tailors' Hall till August, when the members went again on tour in the north of Scotland. On 4th November there appeared an interesting announcement. 'The Edinburgh Company of Comedians being returned from their travels, with success and a fair character, have since been busied in decorating and enlarging their stage and pit; and constantly at their rehearsals getting up fresh plays. Next Wednesday

² Smollett thought this piece, the author of which was Colley Cibber (1671-1757), one of the best comedies of the age.

³ The author was an Irish writer of farces, Charles Coffey, who died in 1745. The work was produced in 1731, and is founded on a plot said to have been suggested by Sir Philip Sidney's Arcadia.

(6th November) they are to open their house with the excellent play of The Kind Imposter [sic]; to which will be added a comick tragedy in one act, called Chrononhotonthologos.¹ The tragedy and tickets to be had at Allan Ramsay's shop.' This was followed on 11th November by The Relapse,² to which was added 'a Pantomime Entertainment in Grotesque Characters; being the comic part of the celebrated Perseus and Andromeda: Intermix'd with several diverting scenes, from Cephalus and Procris and the Burgomaster Trick'd, with all the scenes, etc.' The expenses of this performance appear to have been considerable, as the Company announced that 'nothing less than the full prices will be taken.' The hope was also expressed that 'no gentlemen whatever will take it amiss, if they are refused admittance behind the scenes; it being impossible to perform the entertainment, if there is the least obstruction in that part.'

On 2nd January 1735 there was another performance of The Tempest; or, The Inchanter'd Island, 'with all the scenes, machines, and other decorations.' The piece was introduced 'by an entire new Sea Scene, with songs and musick proper for the same, also the original Furies song by M. Price and Mrs. Bulkeley; with the song of Dear Pretty Youth, set to musick by the late Mr. Henry Purcel.'³ Again the public were warned that 'on account of the representation of the sea,' they could not be allowed behind the scenes. On 15th January there was a gala night, on which occasion 'the several members of the most ancient and honourable society of Free Masons' marched in procession 'with aprons and white gloves, attended with flambeaux' to the Tailors' Hall, where was acted, at their request, 'the comedy of Henry the Fourth.' A benefit performance for Mrs. Bulkeley was given on 22nd January, when *Oroonoko*¹ and The Devil to Pay were staged.

¹ By Henry Carey, who died in 1743. This burlesque tragedy, first acted in 1734, is on the lines of Henry Fielding's Tom Thumb. It is of special interest locally, because the names of two of the characters were applied by Sir Walter Scott to the brothers Ballantyne. James Ballantyne was Aldiborontiphoscophornio, John, Rigdumfunnidios. Carey was the writer of the well-known song Sally in our Alley.

² This play was written by Sir John Vanbrugh (1664-1726), who won greater fame as an architect than as a dramatist. The Relapse (1697) was highly popular in the reign of Anne and was praised by Pope.

³ Henry Purcell (1658-1695), greatest of English composers, was organist of Westminster Abbey and afterwards of the Chapel Royal.

The season closed probably soon after, for the next announcement did not appear till 18th November, when the Edinburgh Company advertised that on the following evening the members would act The Tender Husband,² together with a grotesque piece entitled The Perplex'd Polander in which the part of Harlequin would be taken 'by a person who never appeared in that character on the Edinburgh stage.' As an additional inducement the public were informed that 'all the parts' would be 'entirely new dressed.' On 22nd December performances were given of *The Drummer*³ and The Hussar; or, Harlequin Restor'd.

From 1735 till 1742 theatrical performances at the Tailors' Hall appear to have been discontinued. During the interregnum the Kirk was specially active in a crusade against the drama; but playgoers were not to be balked. Besides, there was a feeling abroad that ecclesiastical censure had been carried too far. The result was that the theatre gained fresh patrons, and ultimately the accommodation of Tailors' Hall became insufficient. Encouraged by a fresh proof of public approval, the players now resorted to the expedient already referred to: they prefaced the theatrical performance (for which no charge was made) with a concert, usually of vocal and instrumental music. The following announcement of

² By Sir Richard Steele (1672-1729), the friend and co-worker of Addison. This comedy was first performed in 1705.

³ A comedy by Joseph Addison (1672-1719). Addison had little dramatic skill, and The Drummer was a failure.

13th March 1742 reveals the modus operandi: 'By desire of his Grace, the Duke of Hamilton, for the benefit of the Master Hamiltons, at the Taylors' Hall, will be perform'd a Concert of Vocal and Instrumental Musick, after which, gratis, She Wou'd and She Wou'd Not,¹ to which will be added, by desire, The Honest Yorkshireman, performed by Liliputians.' Three nights later the tragedy of *Cato*² was represented 'to a fuller house than was ever known' at Tailors' Hall. 'The fine sentiments of this play met with that applause which they deserved from every free Briton. The Ladies particularly distinguished themselves by their virtuous distress. Cato drew tears from the fairest eyes.'

On 8th October the Beggar's Opera was 'played to the entire satisfaction of the audience, who were so pleased with the performance, that they desired it might be acted again on the following Monday.' Thomas Este, the manager at Tailors' Hall, was enterprising, and in December it was announced that 'the Company belonging to the Concert in Taylors' Hall have been at a considerable charge in getting up that celebrated entertainment, called The Negromancer [sic] or Harlequin Doctor Faustus, which will be performed next Friday, in the same manner as it was originally done at the Theatre Royal in Lincoln's-inn-fields.'

Early in 1743 there was a Shakespearean revival 'at the desire of several ladies of distinction.' The play selected was Richard III., which was acted free of charge after the usual concert. The tickets for this performance were 'to be had at the Exchange and John's coffee houses,' as well as 'at Mr. Este's lodgings, at Mr. Monro's, musician, in the Cowgate, near Taylors' Hall.' On 24th February King Lear and The Mock Lawyer were played 'for the benefit of the Master Hamiltons,' and on 28th February, The Wedding Day.

² Another of Addison's failures. The play was first acted in 1713.

The next recorded performance is on 1st February 1744 when *The Fair Penitent*¹ was produced. On this occasion, 'for the better accommodation of the ladies,' the stage was 'ornamented in a handsome manner, and illuminated with waxlight.' Further, there was opened into Scott's Close 'a convenient passage for the accommodation of ladies' chairs being set down at the pit and stage doors.' A fortnight later, *The Orphan*² and 'a farce called The Devil to Pay' were performed for the benefit of the inmates of the Charity Workhouse, which had been erected in the previous year. The theatrical performance, as usual, followed a concert, the managers of which announced their willingness 'to throw in their mite towards the great and charitable work.' They therefore appealed to the public for cordial support. On 6th March, Mrs. Este was given a benefit performance 'at the particular desire of a lady of quality.' An elaborate programme was carried through, which, after vocal and instrumental music, included *The Mourning Bride*³ 'with entertainments between the Acts by M. Froment and Madame Dumont,' and a 'new farce call'd Sir John Cockle at Court, or, the sequel to The Miller of Mansfield' with 'an humorous Epilogue in the character of Nobody, to be spoken by Mrs. Este.'

Not till 11th February 1745 were there other theatri-

¹ This was Nicholas Rowe's third tragedy (1703). Based on Massinger's Fatal Dowry, it yet fell, in Scott's opinion, far below the work of the earlier dramatist. Dr. Samuel Johnson was more cordial. 'You would have enjoyed,' wrote Hannah More in 1782, 'seeing Johnson take me by the hand in the middle of dinner, and repeat, with no small enthusiasm, many passages from The Fair Penitent.'

² By Thomas Otway (1652-1685). The Orphan (1680) and Venice Preserved (1682) were once so highly thought of, that their author was placed only a little lower than Shakespeare himself. Otway was admittedly a master of tragic passion.

cals at Tailors' Hall. On that occasion *Venice Preserved*¹ was played for the benefit of an actress, Mrs. Hamilton. On 13th March, 'by desire of His Grace, the Duke of Hamilton,' Tunbridge Walks, or The Yeomen of Kent and The Lottery were performed, and on 3rd April The Constant Couple, or A Trip to the Jubilee, etc., with Harlequin Skeleton, the entertainment concluding with 'a grand dance called Pigmalion' [sic] for the benefit of M. Froment. This artiste kept a dancing school in Bailie Fyfe's Close, at which address, tickets (pit, 2s. 6d.; gallery, 1s. 6d.) were to be had.

M. Froment's 'benefit' was followed by another for Mr. Este, when The Wrangling Lovers; or, Like Master Like Man, a farcical production, was acted. Soon after, the theatrical performances at Tailors' Hall were brought to an abrupt close, owing to disagreement among the members of the Edinburgh Company of Comedians. Considerable bitterness seems to have been imparted to the dispute, and a deliberate attempt was made to ruin the manager of Tailors' Hall by establishing a rival theatre. For this purpose a public appeal for funds was issued, and tradesmen were employed who agreed that their remuneration should depend upon the proceeds of performances at the new playhouse. A site was obtained in the north-west corner of St. John Street, then being laid out, and upon it was built the Canongate Theatre, the foundation stone of which was laid in August 1746. 'No sooner,' says Arnot, 'were the doors opened, than the Tailors' Hall was deserted.'² The building continued to be used occasionally for theatrical performances, notably Allan

Ramsay's The Gentle Shepherd, which was acted by a 'company of young gentlemen' on 23rd November 1756; but the Tailors' Hall was regarded no longer as a playhouse. Thespis had betaken himself to 'fresh woods and pastures new'—to the Canongate Theatre, with which began a fresh chapter of the history of the Edinburgh stage.

On the evening of Thursday, 20th February 1919, a meeting of the Club was held in Dowell's Rooms, 20 George Street, when a lantern lecture on 'Gourlay's House and its Memories' was delivered by Mr. W. Forbes Gray, F.S.A. (Scot.). Mr. William Cowan, one of the Vice-Presidents, presided over a large attendance.

4 REPORT OF THE TWELFTH ANNUAL MEETING

2. REGISTER HOUSE

By permission of the late Sir J. Patten MacDougall, K.C.B., Deputy-Clerk Register, the Office-Bearers and Council visited the Register House on the afternoon of Saturday, 22nd March 1919. Sir J. Balfour Paul, C.V.O., LL.D., and Professor R. K. Hannay acted as guides.

3. EXHIBITION OF MAPS AND PLANS OF EDINBURGH FROM THE EARLIEST TIMES

By invitation from the Royal Scottish Geographical Society the Members had the privilege of visiting the Exhibition in the Society's Rooms during April 1919.

4. BONALY TOWER

On the afternoon of Saturday, 17th May 1919, by permission of the Trustees of the late Mr. David Simson, the Members visited Bonaly Tower. Mr. W. Forbes Gray acted as leader in the absence of Councillor John Harrison, C.B.E.

5. GRACEMOUNT AND ST. CATHERINE'S WELL

By permission of the late C. E. Green, Esq., F.R.S.E., the Members visited Gracemount and St. Catherine's Well on the afternoon of Saturday, 21st June 1919. Mr. Green acted as leader, and with Mrs. Green entertained the company to tea.

6. LECTURE

By invitation of the Edinburgh Architectural Association, the Members attended at the College of Art on the evening of Thursday, 27th November 1919, when a lantern lecture on 'Old Edinburgh and Some of its Buildings' was delivered by Mr. Henry F. Kerr, A.R.I.B.A., F.S.A. (Scot.). Mr. John Watson, F.R.I.B.A., presided.

All the excursions were well attended by Members and their friends, and the thanks of the Club are due to those who acted as leaders.

DEATH OF DR. W. MOIR BRYCE, PRESIDENT OF THE CLUB

At a meeting of the Council, held on 28th October 1919, Mr. William Còwan, one of the Vice-Presidents, who presided, referred in feeling terms to the great loss the Club had sustained through the death of the President, Dr. W. Moir Bryce, and on his motion the following resolution was unanimously adopted :—

‘The Council desire to record their sense of the great loss the Club has sustained in the death of the President, Dr. Moir Bryce. Dr. Bryce became a member of the Club at its foundation in 1908. He was elected a member of Council in 1910, a Vice-President in 1913, and President in 1914. To the Book of the Club for 1909 he contributed articles on the Flodden Wall and on the Covenanters’ prison, and the succeeding volumes contain several important and interesting articles from his pen. During the last years of his life he was engaged on the exhaustive history of the Burgh Muir, which forms the volume recently issued to the members. To all his work for the Club, Dr. Bryce gave ungrudgingly both of his time and of his great professional knowledge, and his contributions remain as models of careful research and painstaking accuracy. The Council instruct the Secretary to send an extract of this Minute to Mrs. Bryce, with an expression of their deep sympathy with her and her daughter in their bereavement.’

PRESERVATION OF OLD EDINBURGH BUILDINGS

The Council have recently had under consideration a scheme at present before the Town Council for dealing with a large number of old houses which have been condemned by the Public Health Authority.

A memorandum in the following terms has been presented to the Town Council :—

‘To the Lord Provost, Magistrates, and ‘Town Council of the City of Edinburgh.

‘The attention of the Council of the Old Edinburgh Club has been directed to the scheme at present under the consideration of the Town Council, for dealing with many of the buildings in the Old Town which have been certified by the Medical Officer of Health as unfit for occupation.

‘The Council of the Club quite appreciate the necessity which has arisen for dealing with such slum properties, and they recognise that the health of the inhabitants must always be a primary consideration, but they are most anxious that every care should be taken to preserve not only buildings possessing interesting historical associations, but also those which exhibit the architectural characteristics of past periods of our national history. They are convinced that the entire disappearance of these would be an irreparable loss, in depriving the Old Town of those features which still render it an object of interest both to the citizens themselves and to the large number of visitors to the city.

‘The Council beg respectfully to urge that before any building is condemned to entire demolition, care should be taken to ascertain whether it is not possible, while submitting the interior to whatever reconstruction is found necessary, to retain the outside walls and especially the street elevation, and so preserve the external appearance of the buildings.

‘The Council at a recent meeting remitted this matter to a small Sub-Committee. By the courtesy of the Burgh Engineer, the members of this Committee have been supplied with a list of the buildings in nine specified areas which the Medical Officer reports as unfit for habitation in their present condition.

‘This list has been examined in detail, and in regard to certain of the buildings, the following notes are submitted for the consideration of the Town Council :

Area 1 . . Cowgate, Nos. 129-141.

‘This range of buildings, with the Tailors’ Hall behind, forms a group of the greatest interest both historically and architecturally, and its preservation in its entirety is of the very highest importance.

Area 5 . . South Gray’s Close, 1, 5. Fountain Close, 1, 3. Tweeddale Court, 2.

‘These buildings form the front lands in the High Street at the upper end of the closes named. In contrast to the more modern and commonplace houses, this range of buildings exhibits these antique features so few of which now remain in the Royal Mile. For this reason, and on account of the historical interest attaching to more than one of the houses, it is most important that this group should be preserved.

‘The following buildings which appear in the list, though not to be ranked in importance with those just named, are still excellent and interesting examples of the old domestic architecture of the city, and in the case of most, if not all of them, it is hoped that it will be found possible, while reconstructing the interiors, to retain the present substantially-built street fronts.

‘The range of two-storey houses in the Pleasance (Nos. 131-145) may possibly require to be demolished, but if so, it is most desirable that accurate photographs of them be secured.

‘WILL. COWAN, Vice-President.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE CLUB

The tenth volume of the Book of the Club, being that for the years 1917 and 1918, was issued to members in September last.

It is intended that the volume for 1919 should contain the following :—

Lord Provost Stewart and the Defence of Edinburgh in 1745.
(Dr. Blaikie.)

A further instalment of extracts from the Tolbooth Records.
(Mr. Fairley.)

A plan of the Old Town as it was about the middle of the eighteenth century, with explanatory notes. (Mr. Henry F. Kerr.)

8 REPORT OF THE TWELFTH ANNUAL MEETING

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the Report, said—

They regretted Lord Rosebery was not there to preside over the gathering, as he had done on previous occasions. His help and services would never go out from their memory. The Chairman also paid a tribute to the work of Mr. Moir Bryce, mentioning the gifts which he had made of articles of archaeological interest. During the eleven years the Club had existed, they had produced monographs, historical, biographical, traditional, and artistic. Lord Rosebery had said that to enjoy Edinburgh you must not only know the town itself, but know the traditions of it. It had been their programme to interpret these traditions to their members and to the world at large.

With regard to the National War Memorial which it was proposed to put up on the Castle, Dr. Blaikie said he had read with the greatest care the Duke of Atholl's memorandum. The real point of the proposal was the erection of a shrine on the Castle Rock to the memory of those noble lads who fell in the Great War. They would remember Lord Rosebery's letters to the papers, imploring that Edinburgh Castle, which was a history of the city and the country, should not be meddled with. When he thought of the Duke, whose name, family, and title were a part of the history of Scotland, he was certain he would do nothing to injure the stone history of Scotland, and he was glad to think his coadjutor, the hand that was to do the work, was Sir Robert Lorimer. For nine centuries they had been building at the Castle. If the existing structures were religiously preserved, the shrine would merely add a chapter in stone to the history of the Castle and the country. We must always remember that the buildings now ancient and familiar were once new, and a suitable addition would in time, like its predecessors, become ancient and familiar. But one thing must be jealously guarded, the old houses must not be removed.

Dr. Blaikie proceeded to say he thought there had been far too much fuss made about the tramways. If they walked along Princes Street and looked at Edinburgh and Arthur's Seat and the Castle Rock, and the Old Town rising across the valley, they could only think that anything in the way of tramway disfigurement was merely primitive and temporary—a stick or string that would soon pass away as transport conveyances developed. Even the belching smoke and steam of the railway engines in the gardens seemed likely to disappear with the advance of electrical science. The old city would remain and the excrescences would disappear, perhaps, it is true, to give place to others ; but such are little more to be regarded than the necessary scaffolding of a building that was being repaired. There is an old saying, the motto of the family of More, 'Morus tarde moriens, morum cito moritur'—the mulberry tree lives long though the mulberries perish quickly. So let us believe it will be with our city.

It was fortunate that they had as colleagues in the Club the Lord Provost and the Magistrates and Councillors of Edinburgh. They had also the good fortune of having on the Club's Council the City Engineer, Mr. Campbell. They could therefore all work together ; and with regard to the improvement schemes it was well to have the assurance that anything done in connection with the scheme would not have the faintest effect on the historical buildings of Edinburgh. They could look forward with happiness to the Health Department scheme of removing certain slums that probably would be better away.

Edinburgh had one great asset, and that was Edinburgh's history. It had been the Club's business to be a sort of conscience to the Town Council. In improvement schemes there was one item which the sanitary authorities might well consider, and that was the value of soap and water. He was afraid in many of their slums the sordidness had arisen chiefly from the want of soap and water. If in these days the inhabitants would not apply soap and water, it might be the duty of the authorities to do so. Soap and water would be infinitely cheaper than an improvement scheme. The slums were said to be overcrowded, and perhaps it was so. According to R. L. Stevenson the over-population was at least as dense in the epoch of lords and ladies ; nobody cared how many lords and ladies and divines and lawyers crowded into these houses in the past—perhaps the more the merrier. The sanitary arrangements, it is true, were then notorious, and they have long since been swept away. But even then the sordidness of modern times, which is the secret of slum misery, was absent. Sir Walter Scott, writing to Lady Anne Barnard, says : ' I remember all the locale of Hyndford's Close. . . . I suppose the Close once too clean to soil the hem of your ladyship's garments is now a resort for the lowest : and so wears the world away.' Let the historical buildings be cleaned—gutted and refitted internally if necessary—but preserve the ancient and often noble masonry. No member would view with satisfaction the destruction of any of these historical buildings to which Edinburgh owed so much.

10 REPORT OF THE TWELFTH ANNUAL MEETING

Dr. Thomas Ross seconded the adoption of the Report.

He pointed out with regard to the discovery of David's Tower in the Castle, that the late Mr. Blanc had informed the Architectural Association twenty years ago of the location of the tower. He was sure the members of the Club would do all they could to help to preserve the ancient and historical parts of Edinburgh. They should take care, also, that no building disappeared without some record of it being kept.

The Report and Balance Sheet were approved.

Mr. Thomas Ross, LL.D., then moved the re-election of Lord Rosebery as Hon. President, and the Lord Provost of Edinburgh, Sir James Balfour Paul, C.V.O., LL.D., Lyon King of Arms, Professor John Chiene, and Mr. W. B. Blaikie, LL.D., as Hon. Vice-Presidents, and the motion was cordially adopted.

On the motion of the Chairman, Mr. William Cowan was unanimously elected President of the Club.

Mr. Thomas Ross, LL.D., Mr. Robert T. Skinner, and Mr. John Geddie were appointed Vice-Presidents, with Mr. Lewis A. MacRitchie as Hon. Secretary, Mr. Thomas B. Whitson, C.A., as Hon. Treasurer, and Mr. W. Melvill Sym, C.A., as Hon. Auditor.

Rev. William Burnett, B.D., Mr. John Russell, Mr. Charles B. Boog Watson, and Mr. James H. Jamieson were elected Members of Council.

A vote of thanks was awarded to Mr. William Baird, Mr. A. H. Campbell, and Mr. W. Forbes Gray, the retiring Members of Council.

Mr. R. Addison Smith, C.V.O., moved a vote of thanks to Dr. W. B. Blaikie for presiding.

The Meeting then terminated.

REPORT OF THE THIRTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE OLD EDINBURGH CLUB

THE THIRTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE CLUB was held in the Old Council Room, City Chambers, on the afternoon of Friday, 28th January 1921, at 4 o'clock.

Mr. William Cowan, President of the Club, presided. There was a fair attendance of Members.

Apologies were intimated from the Right Hon. The Earl of Cassillis, Mr. R. T. Skinner, Mr. John Kippen, Mr. W. Forbes Gray.

The Annual Report and Abstract of Accounts, which had been issued to the Members, was held as read, and is in the following terms :—

The Council beg to submit to the Club the Thirteenth Annual Report.

During the year ended 31st December 1920 there were 22 vacancies in the membership. These have been filled up, and there still remain 7 names on the list of applicants for admission.

The following meetings were held :—

1. THE HERMITAGE OF BRAID

The first outing of the season was held on 8th May, when a visit was paid to Hermitage of Braid, by kind permission of Lady Skelton. The weather was brilliant, and the company, which numbered fully one hundred, was privileged to view this sylvan retreat in all the glory of early summer. Mr. Thomas Ross, LL.D., was to have acted as leader, but was unavoidably prevented from being present. He sent, however, some notes describing the boundaries of the estate of Braid. These were read by Mr. W. Forbes Gray, F.R.S.E., who afterwards gave some account of the historical and literary associations of Hermitage of Braid.

The ancient castle of Braid, of which the dovecot with its two thousand nests is all that now remains, stood on the top of a high and steep bank on the northern boundary of Hermitage of Braid. Here probably dwelt the Henrys, the first owners of the barony of Braid of whom there is any record. In the fifteenth century the property was owned by the Fairlies, who in the year of the Union of the Crowns purchased the manor house of Bruntsfield from Sir Alexander Lauder of Hatton. The Fairlies were lairds of Braid for many generations, though they are perhaps better known as lairds of Bruntsfield. In 1528 a Fairlie sold a portion of the lands of Braid to Robert Bruce of Bynnings, and in 1631 the remainder of the estate was bought by Sir William Dick. The last Fairlie of Braid was Sir Robert of that ilk, whose son Alexander married Martha, one of the three daughters of John Knox by his second wife, Margaret Stewart, youngest daughter of the 'good laird of Ochiltree.' On their marriage, Martha Knox and Alexander Fairlie were infefted, in conjunct fee, in the lands of Over-Braid. Consequently the daughter of the Reformer had a voice in the disposal of the estate.

Sir William Dick's purchase was effected with the intention that his eldest son John should reside there, the younger son being given the Grange of St. Giles. Soon after, the property was erected into a free barony by Charles I., and the castle of Braid became the chief residence of the Dick family. But the day of the Dicks' prosperity was short. Sir William died in 1655, and as his eldest son had predeceased him, the barony passed to William, eldest son of John Dick and grandson of the Covenanting Provost. Unfortunately, the young man was laird only in name. Instead of 'lands and gear' he inherited only his grandfather's liabilities, together with a lengthy imprisonment in the Tolbooth for debts which he never incurred.

The lot of the heir of Braid was rendered even more pitiable by the unnatural conduct of Sir Andrew Dick of Craighouse, who, while his nephew was in prison, posed as the 'Sole Son, Executor, and Representative of the deceased Sir William.' And it was not for nothing. A tract exists entitled, 'The Suffering Case of William Dick, Esq., grandson and heir of Sir William Dick of Braid, with others of his Family, by the intolerable oppression of Sir Andrew Dick—an unnatural brand thereof—Humbly tendred (for redresse) to the Honourable Members of the Parliament of England.’ The origin of this tract is instructive. The poverty of the Dick family had been brought under the notice of Charles II., who commanded that £5 a week should be paid, the money being given to Sir Andrew for their use. Sir Andrew, who was then living in London, punctually received the allowance, but appropriated it to his own needs. The laird of Braid twice petitioned the Scots Parliament on behalf of the children of Sir William Dick, who had been ‘lying in Prisons these twenty moneths past for Publick Debts in great sufferings of their Persons, Credit and Calling, and weariness of Life, longing for Death more than for Treasures.’ No pecuniary help seems to have resulted from these woeful supplications, though the laird was released from the Tolbooth. In 1678 he married Elizabeth Duncan, but died some years later, leaving a son William, also designated ‘heir of Braid.’

But it was an empty title, for the barony had passed from the Dick family more than twenty years before. Shortly after Sir William Dick’s death, the property, heavily mortgaged, was acquired by royal charter by John Brown, laird of Gorgiemyln. This charter was confirmed by another granted by Charles II. in 1681.

The ancient castle of Braid seems to have been deserted during the eighteenth century. At any rate, the present mansion of Hermitage was built about 1780, by which time the Gordons of Cluny, Aberdeenshire, owned the lands of Braid. The house is designed in the castellated style known as ‘Carpenter’s Gothic,’ and has points of resemblance with Gillespie’s Hospital, Nelson’s Monument, and St. George’s Episcopal Church, York Place. The original design, however, was altered some years ago when an additional storey was erected.

Charles Gordon of Cluny, to whom the building of the modern house is attributed, was the father of the beautiful Joanna Gordon who became Countess of Stair. Her wedded life was unhappy, and after the annulment of the marriage in 1820 she is said to have lived a solitary life at Hermitage of Braid. Subsequently the estate passed to John Gordon of Cluny. Mr. Gordon, who was also proprietor of the Hebridean estate of South Uist and Barra, died childless in 1878. In 1880 his widow, the present owner of Hermitage, married her second husband, Sir Reginald Cathcart.

16 REPORT OF THIRTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING

While Lady Gordon Cathcart has been proprietrix since 1878, the Hermitage has been the home of the family of Sir John Skelton since 1868—a period of fifty-three years. Sir John Skelton, who died in 1897, admirably combined practical life with literature. He was secretary and afterwards chairman of the Local Government Board for Scotland, but he was best known as the chivalrous defender of Mary Stuart, the biographer of Maitland of Lethington, and, under the pseudonym of 'Shirley,' an essayist of singular charm and vivacity. One of Sir John's lifelong friends was Froude the historian, who was a frequent guest at the Hermitage. Writing to Skelton in May 1876, he says: 'An evening or two with you in your beautiful glen will be better than any quantity of idle dinner-party talk. Abana and Pharpar are not better than the waters of Israel or the murmur of Lothianburn.' Froude had intended to come to Edinburgh in April 1890 to receive the degree of Doctor of Laws, but was prevented by illness. 'I will still hope,' he writes consolingly, 'to see the Hermitage once more.' In June 1894 the historian concluded an epistle to his friend as follows: 'When, if ever, shall I see the Hermitage again?' They were words of farewell.

2. ST. CUTHBERT'S CHURCHYARD

On the afternoon of Saturday, 12th June 1920, the Members visited St. Cuthbert's Churchyard. Mr. Robert T. Skinner, M.A., F.R.S.E., acted as leader.

The company visited the graves, or inspected the monuments, in the following order:—

1. Lord Rockville, judge, died 1792, son of second Earl of Aberdeen. Met Dr. Johnson in Edinburgh. Member of Crochallan Fencibles.
2. Gordons of Cluny. Charles Gordon (died 1814) built The Hermitage of Braid. His daughter Joanna, buried here, was the unfortunate wife of the seventh Earl of Stair.
3. Adam Rolland of Gask, advocate, died 1819. 'In the external circumstances, but not in frolic or fancy, my prototype for Paul Pleydell' (SCOTT). Portrait painted by Sir Henry Raeburn.
4. Lord Alva (formerly Lord Barjarg), judge, died 1796. Mrs. Maxwell, the mother of the Countess of Sutherland and Lady Glenorchy, married Lord Tinwald, who by his first wife was already the father of Lord Alva.
5. William B. Johnstone, R.S.A., died 1868.
6. Son of Lieut.-Col. James Skinner, C.B., whose name is associated with Skinner's Horse.
7. Walkers of Dalry.

8. Fifteenth and last Earl of Glencairn, died 1796. Canon of Church of England. Younger brother of Burns's patron.
9. Lord Ardmillan, judge, died 1876. Solicitor-General for Scotland under Lord Aberdeen.
10. Rev. Thomas Cleghorn, died 1847; for 48 years Minister of Smailholm, and known to Sir Walter Scott.
11. Right Hon. J. H. A. Macdonald, G.C.B. (Lord Kingsburgh), Lord Justice-Clerk, died 1919.
12. John Paul, D.D., St. Cuthbert's, Moderator of General Assembly, died 1873.
13. John Lee, D.D., LL.D., Principal of Edinburgh University and Moderator of General Assembly, died 1859. Entrusted by Jupiter Carlyle of Inveresk with MS. of Autobiography.
14. Thomas Snell Jones, D.D., died 1837. Lady Glenorchy invited him to her Chapel, where he ministered for 58 years. See Kay's Portraits.
15. Thomas de Quincey, author, died 1859. Buried from 42 Lothian Street. The daughter purchased for her father 'one grave in the old barn.'
16. Rev. Neil M'Vicar, St. Cuthbert's, died 1747. Memorable prayer in St. Cuthbert's on Prince Charles Edward's return to Edinburgh after Prestonpans.
17. David Dickson, D.D., St. Cuthbert's, died 1842. Buried from 'the West Kirk Manse.' He assisted at the service in Abbotsford on the occasion of Scott's funeral. Monument by Handyside Ritchie at west end of church.
18. Rev. Robert Pont, St. Cuthbert's, Scottish Reformer, died 1606. The Regent Mar made him Judge of Court of Session. Six times Moderator of General Assembly. Woodrow states that Pont had 'a discovery of Queen Elizabeth's death that same day she died,' and Pont told King James VI. at Holyrood. [Monument in church].
19. Rev. David Williamson, St. Cuthbert's, Moderator of General Assembly, died 1706. Buried by request near Pont. First Scottish clergyman to wear a watch.
20. Bain Whyt, W.S., died 1818. Founded Wagering Club in 1775.
21. Andrew Combe, M.D., physiologist and phrenologist, died 1847.
22. Relief by John Flaxman, R.A., in memory of children of Francis Redfearn. Removed to vestibule of church, 1917.
23. Monument in church to John Napier of Merchiston, mathematician, died 1617.
24. James MacKnight, D.D., Old Kirk, Moderator of General Assembly, died 1800. Author of Harmony of the Gospels.
25. Lord Henderland, judge, died 1795. Met Dr. Johnson in Edinburgh. Epitaph by Shenstone.
26. Robert Ainslie, W.S., died 1838 at 2 Graham Street. Accompanied Robert Burns on Border tour, 1787. See Noctes Ambrosianae.

18 REPORT OF THIRTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING

27. John Stark, printer, died at 21 Rutland Street in 1849. Author of Picture of Edinburgh.
28. Henry Nisbet of Dean, died 1692. Made a quarry in the churchyard in order to build the tomb; consequently compelled to give gratuity to the poor.
29. Susan E. Ferrier, died 1854. Wrote Inheritance, Destiny, etc.; collaborated with Miss Clavering in writing Marriage.
30. George Lorimer, Dean of Guild, killed in fire at Theatre Royal, 1865.
31. William Bonnar, R.S.A., died 1853. Pictures include 'Knox preaching in the Castle of St. Andrews.'
32. Alexander Sutherland, died 1831, author of Tales of a Pilgrim.
33. Parents of Rev. Robert Murray M'Cheyne, accomplished scholar, Minister of St. Peter's, Dundee.
34. Henry Balfour Biggar, brilliant young advocate, died 1817.
35. Second Lord Ashburton, with whom title became extinct in 1823. Title claimed and obtained in 1835 by Alexander Baring, brother of first Lord's widow.
36. Mark Napier, Sheriff of Dumfries and Galloway, died 1879. Author of Montrose and Dundee.
37. James Pillans, LL.D., successor of Adam as Rector of High School and afterwards Professor of Humanity in Edinburgh University, died 1864. Connected with Edinburgh Review, and satirised by Byron, probably unjustly.
38. Raeburns. Sir Henry Raeburn, R.A., purchased the ground, but is himself buried in dormitory of St. John's Church, Princes Street.
39. Lieut.-General Norman Macleod of Macleod, died at Guernsey and buried from George Street, 1801. Entertained Dr. Johnson for nine days at Dunvegan.
40. Haldanes. Robert Haldane, W.S., of Cloan, father of Viscount Haldane, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, 1912-15. James Alexander Haldane, first minister of the first congregational church in Scotland.

3. PILRIG HOUSE

The last outing of the season was held on Saturday, 10th July, when, through the kindness of the Misses Balfour-Melville, the members, to the number of about one hundred, visited Pilrig House. Sir James Balfour Paul, C.V.O., LL.D., acted as leader, and gave an interesting account of the historical and literary associations of the mansion.

Sir James, who is himself a lineal descendant of the lairds of Pilrig, began by pointing out that the lands of Pilrig were part of the large Barony of Broughton which David I. granted to the Abbey of Holyrood. In early times some one must have built a tower or 'peel' on the ridge, whence the name 'Peelrig' or 'Pilrig,' a name which occurs also in Berwickshire. Its first appearance in actual history, however, was not till 1506 when a Monypenny was in possession of the lands, which his descendants held for many years.

In 1605 Patrick Monypenny, a boy of fourteen, was forcibly abducted from a house in Glendevon which belonged to the family by his uncle, the laird of Pitmillie, who took him to Cleish Castle and married him to his daughter. When Pitmillie was charged with this escapade before the Privy Council he calmly produced the juvenile laird, who said he had gone of his own free will. This, however, the Lords thought rather flimsy, and ordered Pitmillie to find caution in 5000 merks that he would produce the boy before the Session on the first Court day, so that curators might be nominated for him. He must have been rather a lively boy, for in 1611 he was in a more serious row. Walking one day with two friends, one being a younger brother of the poet Drummond of Hawthornden, he met two sons of Cockburn of Ormiston and their followers. There was then a family feud between the Cockburns and the Earl of Linlithgow. It is difficult to say why young Pilrig should have espoused Linlithgow's quarrel, unless it was that his then superior, Sir Lewis Bellenden, had married the sister of Linlithgow. But however it was, there was a fray between the two parties, who made 'a verie gret trouble and commotion' in the street, pursuing each other with drawn swords. The end of it was that they were all committed to ward in Edinburgh Castle. Ultimately the Council took the matter in hand and patched up a peace between the parties, who 'choppit hands and imbracit ane another.'

Possibly young Monypenny set the pace too fast. At any rate, in 1623 the lands of Pilrig passed to Gilbert Kirkwood, a jeweller in Edinburgh. He it was who built the present house, which is a good example of the style of the period, in the absence of all defensive features and in the introduction of Renaissance details in its quaintly-formed gables and chimneys.

It was originally an L-shaped house, though this form has been lost owing to modern additions. The entrance door was in the round angle turret which contains a wheel stair. It was surmounted by a pediment containing a shield with the Kirkwood arms on it and the initials of the founder and his wife Margaret, a daughter of Henry Foulis of Colinton. As was common in those days, a verse from Scripture was inserted, as follows: 'For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved,' etc. The same initials, with the date of the building of the house (1638), are on another part of the house, and the date alone over an attic window in the east gable.

Pilrig must have been a fine breezy open site when the Kirkwoods acquired it. Probably there was little cultivated land about it, and there were few trees. Whins and heather were, however, plentiful. In the records of South Leith Church there are frequent references to whins, heather, and straw, which were used as disinfectants during the plague. For instance, 'Lady Pilrig' was asked to supply them in order that the houses might be 'singit and fyred with heather and the "guids" purgeit and cleansiet with fire and water.'

Amongst others who fell a victim to the plague of 1645 was Gilbert Kirkwood. He was succeeded by another Gilbert, but the family did not retain possession very long. It then passed into the hands of a Sir William Douglas and was by him sold in 1717 to William Alves, who parted with it in the same year to Lord Rosebery. Next year his lordship disposed of it to James Balfour, a Leith merchant, who traced his descent back to an Andrew Balfour who was in the king's household in 1484, and whose descendants acquired successively Inchrye on the Loch of Lindores, and Powis, which nestles at the foot of the Ochils.

In concluding, Sir James referred to the fact that R. L. S. (whose mother was the daughter of a brother of the laird of Pilrig) leaves his hero David Balfour at the end of Kidnapped on the point of going to consult his kinsman the laird of Pilrig, who also figures in Catrina. This laird was Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Edinburgh from 1754 to 1764, and afterwards Professor of Public Law, which Chair he held for fifteen years.

4. LECTURE

On the evening of Thursday, 25th November 1920, a meeting of the Club was held, by permission of the Royal Society, in their Hall, George Street, when a lantern lecture on 'Edinburgh before Flodden' was delivered by Captain F. C. Mears, architect. Mr. Cowan, President of the Club, occupied the chair.

All the meetings were well attended by Members and their friends, and the thanks of the Club are due to those who acted as leaders.

PRESERVATION OF OLD EDINBURGH BUILDINGS

The memorandum presented to the Town Council has been fully minuted in the City Records and will receive the careful consideration of the Magistrates and Town Council.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE CLUB

The Council greatly regret the delay in issuing the eleventh volume of the Book of the Club. Two of the articles contained in it were passed for press some time ago, and the third article is now practically completed.

The Council have had under their serious consideration the finances of the Club in relation to their publications. The members may be reminded that, by the constitution of the Club, the regulation of all matters relative to publications is in the hands of the Council, and although previous to the year 1917 they were able to issue a volume each year, there is no rule making this yearly issue obligatory. Owing to the very great increase in the costs of book production, the amount available from the income of the last four years, 1917-1920, has not been sufficient to defray the cost of more than two volumes, the amount at present in hand being all required for the volume about to be issued. It is evident, therefore, that so long as the present high prices continue, the Club volumes cannot be issued so frequently as in the past, unless the rate of subscription were very considerably increased. After giving the subject their most careful consideration, the Council have come to the conclusion that such increase of subscription is inadvisable in the best interests of the Club, and that it should remain at the present figure, viz. 10s. 6d. Future issues of the Book of the Club will be made as frequently as the available funds permit and suitable material is at the Council's disposal.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the Report, said—

It was gratifying to find that one of the items was of sufficient importance for the Scotsman to print it in full—the list of the important people buried in St. Cuthbert's Churchyard. Alluding to the memorandum on Old Edinburgh buildings which was presented to the Town Council, he said it was very favourably received by the Council and had been fully minuted in the City Records. He understood that the position of this matter was something like this. A considerable number of houses in the Old Town would shortly be condemned by the Public Health Committee as unfit for habitation in their present state. These would be handed over to the Reconstruction Committee to be dealt with. He thought they might feel fairly confident that the remedy for the present unsatisfactory condition of these houses would be reconstruction, and not, as too often in the past, demolition. (Hear, hear!) What the members of the Club and many more of the citizens were interested in, was that what had been called the old 'face' of Edinburgh should, as far as was now possible, be preserved; that, while everything should be done to render these old houses sanitary and habitable, the architectural features of their exteriors should be religiously preserved, and that where any alterations were found necessary they should be carried out in a spirit of reverence for the past, and that nothing should be done which would modernise and so vulgarise the appearance of their old streets. He would venture at this point to throw out a suggestion. They had in Edinburgh many capable architects who had made a special study of the old domestic architecture of Scotland and of Edinburgh in particular, and it was to be hoped that the Committee entrusted with the work of reconstruction would take advantage of the best professional advice they could get in carrying out their scheme. If this work of reconstruction were energetically carried out on right lines, not only would a stop be put to the regrettable destruction in the past of much that might have been saved, but also a great step would be taken towards the solution of the present housing difficulty. With regard to the publications, the Council greatly regretted the delay in issuing the eleventh volume of the Book of the Club. The Council had to consider seriously whether they should, following the example of many other societies, raise the annual subscription. Evidently this step was inevitable if volumes such as those already printed were to be issued as frequently as hitherto. After giving the whole matter the most careful consideration, the Council decided against making any proposal to raise the subscription, but they wished the members to understand that, in the meantime at least, there would have to be a longer interval between the issue of the several volumes, in order that sufficient funds might be available for the purpose.

The Report and Balance Sheet were approved.

The Chairman then moved the re-election of Lord Rosebery as Hon. President, and the Lord Provost of Edinburgh, Sir James Balfour Paul, C.V.O., LL.D., Lyon King of Arms, Professor John Chiene, and Mr. W. B. Blaikie, LL.D., as Hon. Vice-Presidents, and the motion was cordially adopted.

On the motion of Mr. Thomas Ross, LL.D., Mr. William Cowan was unanimously elected President of the Club.

Mr. Thomas Ross, LL.D., Mr. Robert T. Skinner, and Mr. John Geddie were appointed Vice-Presidents, with Mr. Lewis A. MacRitchie as Hon. Secretary, Mr. Thomas B. Whitson, C.A., as Hon. Treasurer, and Mr. W. Melvill Sym, C.A., as Hon. Auditor.

Professor G. Baldwin Brown, Professor R. K. Hannay,

24 REPORT OF THIRTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING

Mr. W. Forbes Gray, and Mr. W. Hume Kerr were elected Members of Council.

A vote of thanks was awarded to Mr. William Angus, Mr. Henry F. Kerr, Mr. W. W. Macfarlane, and Mr. David Robertson, the retiring Members of Council.

Mr. John Harrison, LL.D., moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Cowan for presiding.

The Meeting then terminated.

CONSTITUTION

I. The name of the Club shall be the 'Old Edinburgh Club.'

II. The objects of the Club shall be the collection and authentication of oral and written statements or documentary evidence relating to Edinburgh; the gathering of existing traditions, legends, and historical data; and the selecting and printing of material desirable for future reference.

III. The membership of the Club shall be limited to three hundred and fifty. Applications for membership must be sent to the Secretary in writing, countersigned by a proposer and a seconder who are Members of the Club. The admission of Members shall be in the hands of the Council, who shall have full discretionary power in filling up vacancies in the membership as these occur.

IV. The annual subscription shall be 10s. 6d., payable in advance on 1st January. Any Member whose subscription is not paid within four months from that date may be struck off the Roll by the Council.

V. The affairs of the Club shall be managed by a Council, consisting of the President, three Vice-Presidents, Secretary, Treasurer, and twelve Members. The Office-bearers shall be elected annually. Four of the Members of Council shall retire annually in rotation, and shall not be eligible for re-election for one year. The Council shall have power to fill up any vacancy in their number arising during the year, to make bye-laws, and to appoint Sub-Committees for special purposes. Representatives to such Committees may be appointed from the general body of Members. At meetings of the Club nine shall be a quorum, and at meetings of the Council seven.

VI. The Secretary shall keep proper minutes of the business and transactions, conduct official correspondence, have custody of, and be responsible for, all books, manuscripts, and other property placed in his charge, and shall submit an Annual Report of the proceedings of the Club.

VII. The Treasurer shall keep the Accounts of the Club, receive all moneys, collect subscriptions, pay accounts after these have been passed by the Council, and shall present annually a duly audited statement relative thereto.

VIII. The Annual Meeting of the Club shall be held in January, at which the reports by the Secretary and the Treasurer shall be read and considered, the Council and the Auditor for the ensuing year elected, and any other competent business transacted.

IX. The Council shall hold stated meetings in April and October, and shall arrange for such meetings throughout the year as they think expedient, and shall regulate all matters relative to the transactions and publications of the Club. Papers accepted by the Council for publication shall become the property of the Club.

X. Members shall receive one copy of each of the works published by or on behalf of the Club as issued, but these shall not be supplied to any Member whose subscription is in arrear. Contributors shall receive twenty copies of their communications. The Council shall have discretionary powers to provide additional copies for review, presentation, and supply to approved public bodies or societies.

XI. In the event of the membership falling to twelve or under, the Council shall consider the advisability of winding up the Club, and shall take a vote thereon of each Member whose subscription is not in arrear. Should the vote, which shall be in writing, determine that the Club be dissolved, the Council shall discharge debts due by the Club, and shall then deposit in trust, with some recognised public institution or corporate body, any residue of funds or other properties, including literary, artistic, and other material collected by the Club, for preservation, in order that the same may be available to students of local history in all time coming.

XII. No alteration of this Constitution shall be made except at the Annual Meeting of the Club. Notice of any proposed alteration must be given in writing to the Secretary, who shall intimate the same by circular to each Member not less than seven days prior to the meeting. No alteration shall be made unless supported by two-thirds of the Members present at the meeting.
